WHITE STAR LINER AFIRE AT HER PIER

Italian Reservists Who Spent Night in Steerage Were Routed by Smoke and Fled in Scant Attire to Pier—Police Called to Restore Order—Ship Was Due to Sail for Genoa at 8.30 This Morning

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Sixteen hundred bales of cotton stored in the lower hold of the White Star liner Crete caught fire early today as the vessel lay at her pier under steam and ready to weigh anchor for Genoa. Several hundred Italian reservists, crowded into the steerage overnight, were routed by smoke and fled in scant attire to the pier.

The fire gained headway rapidly. Within 15 minutes from the time the first wisps of smoke curled up from the second hatchway the blaze in the hold appeared to be a roaring furnace and a heavy cloud of smoke hung over the river. Cowing to the length of the pier and other obstacles the firemen were unable to get a stream into the

RUSSIAN DETACHMENT PLAYS CLEVER TRICK

Cossacks and Artillerymen Pretend Retreat and Austrians Rose to the Bait—No Decisive Results From the Battle of the Aisne—Rain Causes Change in German Operations—Downpour Drives Germans From Their Trenches

PETROGRAD, Sept. 25, 4.45 a. m.—The Russkoe Slovo has obtained from wounded soldiers, it states, a description of a clever ruse whereby a small Russian detachment in Gallia virtually wiped out a large Austrian force. In its account of the incident it says:

"According to a prearranged plan, several squadrons of Cossacks and artillerymen, simulating retreat, began to fall back rapidly under cover of the infantry.

"The Austrians rose to the bait and emerged from their trenches in pursuit in the direction of Small river, where companies of Russian infantry checked the furious Austrian onslaught. Cossacks and artillery, crossing by a bridge entrenched themselves on the opposite bank, posting several machine guns while the artillery hid their guns in trenches under the bushes unperceived by the enemy.

"When the preparations were complete for the enemy's reception, the infantry hurriedly retreated to the opposite bank where they pretended to set fire to the bridge as though intending to cut off the enemy's advance.

"The Austrian troops, seeing before them a small body of Russians, blindly charged. The enemy's infantry, with shouts of victory approached the bridge, while their cavalry dashed through the river. A terrific explosion was heard and the bridge which was crowded with massed Austrian columns was blown to pieces while on the opposite bank the Russian guns and quick fliers scattered death among the advancing Austrians until the river was choked with bodies.

"The fighting at St. Quentin, according to the correspondent, has been fierce and determined. The Germans drove the French out and secured a large part of the town which they held by means of their machine guns. The French, he thinks, could have expelled them by a bombardment, but feared that this would set the town afire and cause great loss of life among the inhabitants.

DOWNPOUR OF RAIN DRIVES GERMAN FROM TRENCHES AND CHANGES PLANS

LONDON, Sept. 25, 4.22 a. m.—The correspondent of the Daily Mail in France says that rain has resulted in a change in the German operations on the Aisne. The chalky soil, he says, holds water in the trenches like a cup and the autumn downpour, therefore, has driven the Germans out of their trenches and forced them to fight in the open, where the French get at them with their bayonets.

The Germans drove the French out and secured a large part of the town which they held by means of their machine guns. The officers of the committee in charge consist of the following: Miss Ruth Burke, chairman; Miss Bessie Hadley, assistant chairman; John P. Sawyer, treasurer; Miss Pever, assistant treasurer; Miss N. P. H. Robbins, chairman of advertising committee.

WARREN CLUB PARTY

HELD ITS THIRD ANNUAL SOCIABLE AT ASSOCIATE HALL LAST EVENING

The Warren club, composed of several young men prominent in the social affairs of the city conducted another successful event last evening in Associate hall, the occasion being the third annual autumn party. There was a very large attendance present, 400 young couples being the estimate given, and the evening's program proved very enjoyable and reflects much credit on the hospitality of the committee in charge.

Dancing was begun at 8 o'clock to the pleasing strains of Broderick's concert orchestra, and from that time on, the young people danced up until 12 o'clock, when that old saying "the longest way round is the sweetest way home" repeated itself over and over again to nearly everyone present.

About 9 o'clock, Mr. Joseph Sheehy and partner, Miss Florence Bridgeford, gave a most delightful exhibition of the modern dance steps. The one-step, maxixe and hesitation were all ably portrayed by this clever young couple who have tripped themselves into the hearts of people all over New England in the comparatively short time they have been dancing. They were given a great hand on leaving the floor.

The following officers and committee are responsible for the success of the event:

General manager, John H. Farrell; assistant general manager, Fred Smith; floor director, Hugh Finnerty; assistant floor director, John Joyce; treasurer, Edward Barrington; assistant treasurer, John Baxter; chief aid, Frank Finnerty; aide, everybody.

FRENCH OFFICER SHOT

Documents of a Treasonable Nature Found in His Possession
—He Had a German Wife

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—Another version of the reason why the French desisted in coming to the support of the British when they were hard pressed by the Germans at Mons was told by the friends in New York today by Miss Eva Gay of Norwood, Mass., a former Mount Holyoke college girl who has been teaching school in Spain and returned from England Wednesday on the Olympia.

Miss Gay said that she had been told by English friends who had relatives connected with the British war office that General Joffre in response to the request of General French, the British commander, for reinforcements to extricate him from his dangerous position entrusted orders for the dispatch of such reinforcements to a certain high French officer. When the execution of these orders was delayed an investigation was begun. It was known that the French officer had a German wife. His home in Paris was searched and there were found military documents of a treasonable nature. This officer was immediately court-martialed, convicted and shot.

Miss Gay said that she had been told that British authorities had refused to permit publication of the affair for the fear of its effect upon the morale of the English troops.

CREATION AFTER WAR

GERMAN PAPER SAYS GERMAN VICTORY WILL PRODUCE MORE BEAUTIFUL WORKS

AMSTERDAM, via London, Sept. 25.—A copy of the Frankfurter Zeitung, published at Frankfurt-on-Main, Germany which has been received here, contains the following:

"War, which destroys, also opens a way to new creations. At all times mankind has regained courage to create new works, stronger and more beautiful than those which have been destroyed.

"If the German armies in their victorious advance have had to hunt the enemy, not only from the fortresses but also from the ancient and sacred seats of civilization, we have at least the consolation that a victory bought so dearly will eventually produce greater and more beautiful works than medieval churches towering to the sky."

Beer Question Settled to Satisfaction of All Concerned

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—It became known here that an issue involving the enforcement of Secretary Daniels' anti-liquor regulation had been raised and settled to the entire satisfaction of all concerned. A big beer wagon was driven up to the entrance of the Boston navy yard with many kegs consigned to the Argentine battleship Rivadavia. The officer in command refused to admit the cargo and reported the incident to Secretary Daniels, who approved his action. Later, however, according to official advice, a bum boat carried the beer out to the Rivadavia.

Mrs. Baker So Weak—Could Not Do Her Work—Found Relief in Novel Way.

Adrian, Mich.—"I suffered terribly with female weakness and backache and got so weak that I could hardly do my work. When I washed my dishes I had to sit down and when I would sweep the floor I would get so weak that I would have to get a drink every few minutes, and before I did my dusting I would have to lie down. I got so poorly that my folks thought I was going into consumption. One day I found a piece of paper blowing around the yard and I picked it up and read it. It said 'Saved from the Grave,' and told what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for women. I showed it to my husband and he said, 'Why don't you try it?' So I did, and after I had taken two bottles I felt better and I said to my husband, 'I don't need any more,' and he said 'You had better take it a little longer anyway.' So I took it for three months and got well and strong."—Mrs. ALONZO E. BAKER, 9 Tecumseh St., Adrian, Mich.

Not Well Enough to Work.

In these words is hidden the tragedy of many a woman, housekeeper or wage earner who supports herself and is often helping to support a family, on meagre wages. Whether in house, office, factory, shop, store or kitchen, woman should remember that there is one tried and true remedy for the ills to which all women are prone, and that is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It promotes that vigor which makes work easy and restores the system to a healthy normal condition.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—Navy department officials today were congratulating themselves over the settlement of the question of tobacco in the navy, which had been up for consideration for some time and had caused much discussion and speculation. According to an announcement by Secretary Daniels, all apparently desirable brands will be admitted for sale in the ship store aboard and commissary stores at yards on an equal footing of free and fair competition with one another.

The chemist at the Brooklyn yard will analyze all samples submitted after which the department will enter into contract for furnishing such quantities as may be required of each brand found to conform to the necessary standard of purity.

It is stipulated, however, that such transactions must not be harmful to the general situation and must be kept within bounds. All the business to be conducted under this latest rule, which includes the stocks handled by the "curb," will be supervised by a committee consisting of stock exchange members, non-member bond dealers and the chairman of the curb market.

MASSACHUSETTS BAY TO THE RIO GRANDE

Inland Waterway Discussed by Secretary Daniels of the Navy Department—Canal Important Factor to the Navy Even in Times of Peace

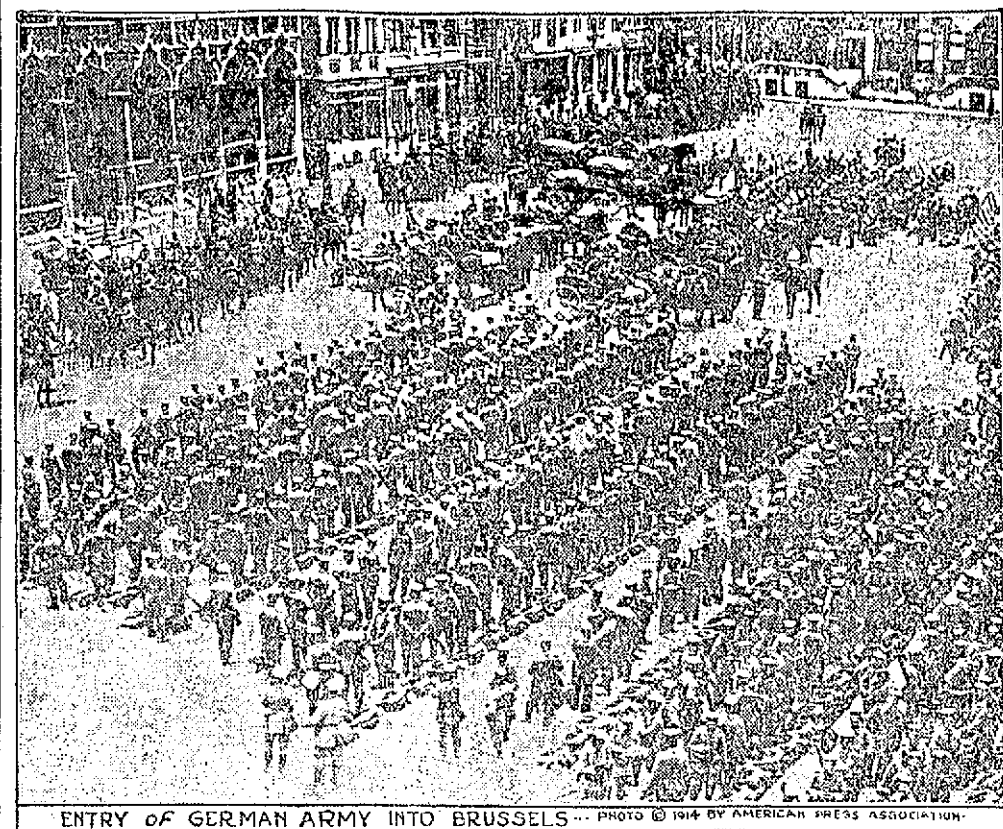

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 25.—What the proposed great inland waterway from Massachusetts bay to the Rio Grande would mean to the nation in time of war was discussed here today by Secretary Daniels of the navy department before the convention of the Atlantic Deep Waterways association.

"Not only will this waterway lend itself tremendously to the development of internal commerce and tend to bring down the rates of transportation," said Mr. Daniels, "but also provides unusual facilities for self-defense in time of war. In any conflict between nations which have navies, the all-important consideration is to secure, if possible, immediate control of the sea and the power which possesses the superior navy is usually able to do this. In such case the navy and the power takes refuge in some deep and well defended harbor, where it seeks to wear out its enemy by fighting it in detachments and in other ways wearing down its strength. If this weaker power, having thus taken refuge in a safe harbor, can maneuver its ships through inland channels to other exits, it enjoys a great advantage. The submarine has long been considered a source of great effectiveness and even if the submarines along of the navy could have free movement through an inland waterway, the power whose navy was bottled up would be in a position to make a longer defense until it could bring into play the resources of its country. It would be able to slip out at various exits and do damage to its enemy. If the ships of the inferior power were damaged in a general engagement they could utilize an inland waterway to distribute themselves among various shipyards for repairs all the quicker. The whole nature of a war would be greatly affected by available inland canals.

"Even in time of peace, the canal is a very important factor to the navy and lends itself to preparation for national security. Large quantities of heavy materials are constantly required by the government for its navy yards and on these the transportation charges by the waterway would be more than cut in half."

ENTRY OF THE GERMAN TROOPS INTO BRUSSELS— THEY WERE NOT FORCED TO SHOOT UP THE CITY

This picture shows the actual entry of the German army into Brussels. The Germans were not forced to shoot up the city because the people were persuaded to lay down their arms, and the Belgian army had withdrawn to Antwerp. The Germans still hold Brussels.

THE WASHINGTON CLUB

HELD ENJOYABLE OUTING AT MARTIN LUTHER GROUNDS—BASE BALL GAME A FEATURE

The members of the Washington club of this city brought their out of doors season to a close in a most appropriate and enjoyable manner Thursday when they held their annual fall outing at the Martin Luther camp on the Merrimack. Nearly all of the members were present.

The party left the club headquarters in Prescott street in the morning, making the journey to the scene of the festivities in automobiles. Immediately upon their arrival at the grounds, the fun began, and continued until the afternoon was brought to an end in the evening. One of the big features was the baseball game between the married and single men. The Benedicts were captained by John J. Sullivan, while Thomas P. Kelley led the bachelors. The game resulted in a victory for the married members by the score of 10 to 4. The umpire was Auctioneer Chas. Keyes, and several of the single men say he gave them a awful row.

Following the baseball game, there were other sports in which nearly everyone took part. The members returned to the city in the evening after a most enjoyable day. The arrangements for the outing were in charge of the executive committee of the club.

SIX BOYS ESCAPED

FROM THE ESSEX COUNTY TRAINING SCHOOL AND CAME HITHERWARD

The police of Lowell's suburban towns have been notified of the escape of six youths, all about 15 years of age, from the Essex County Training school, Lawrence. It is thought that the lads journeyed along the country roads in an endeavor to keep out of sight of the police and officials of the school believe they may have headed toward Tewksbury or Billerica.

The six boys were missed about 7 o'clock Wednesday night and the roads and fields were searched throughout the night but no clue as to their whereabouts was found. The names and addresses of the boys are: Gerald Organ, 15, New York city; Philip Spear, 15, Lynn; Albert Duschene, 15, Salem; Joseph Tattan and Michael Lakowski, 15. All were attired in blue suits.

GENERAL VILLA AND GENERAL CARRANZA

Washington Officials Hope for Settlement of Differences in Mexico—Cutting of Telegraph and Telephone Wires Between Vera Cruz and Mexico City Has Occasioned Some Uneasiness

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—Secretary Garrison today ordered Brigadier General Funston, commanding the American forces at Vera Cruz, not to withdraw during the next ten days.

Secretary Garrison announced that the order was caused by a delay in the adjustment of many details incident to the transfer of funds and the customs house.

Administration officials today anxiously awaited the crystallization of events in the break between Carranza and Villa, still hopeful that efforts now being made to settle their differences would meet with success. This feeling is shared also by Rafael Zubaran Company, head of the constitutionalist agency here, who in a statement expressed the hope that the troubles between the two generals will be satisfactorily adjusted on the ground that no real cause exists for the break.

It is felt here that the warning given them by Paul Fuller, President Wilson's personal representative, that the administration would discountenance further fighting in Mexico would be heeded.

The cutting of all telegraphic and telephone communication and the only railroad between Vera Cruz and Mexico City by a force of men under Higinio Aguirre, a former federal general, occasioned some uneasiness in official circles today, especially in view of the fact that many Americans who fled from Mexico during the revolution had returned to the capital. Officials anxiously awaited the reasons for communications being cut off and information as to what is transpiring in Mexico City.

Whether these developments in the situation would alter plans of the Washington government for the withdrawal of the American forces from Vera Cruz could not be foretold early today. Consul General Canada at Vera Cruz has recommended to the state department that in view of the changed situation it would be advisable to remain the American forces there pending more normal conditions.

CHANCE TO MAKE PEACE
MEXICO CITY, Sept. 25.—Prominent men here believe there is still some chance to make peace between Carranza and Villa before the breach becomes irreparable. Meanwhile the general public here does not seem to have been informed of the controversy.

It is understood President Wilson and Secretary Garrison have not yet considered the possible effect of the Villa revolt on the American evacuation and as Mr. Garrison plans to leave Washington today for the week-end it is probable the question will not be taken up until the cabinet meeting Tuesday.

General Funston, in a report today, confirmed news of the cutting of rail and wire communication between Vera Cruz and Mexico City. He added that it was not known whether constitutionalists along the railroad were fighting among themselves or whether the work of destruction was by former federal soldiers.

An American officer on the Arizona frontier in a report today, described the manner of Villa's proclamation of independence. He said a notice declaring the concentration of the Villa forces for a march on Mexico City was written in chalk on a blackboard in front of the Nogales customs office by persons unknown.

General Villa has sent word that no matter what eventuates he would afford every protection to all Americans and foreigners.

FILTRATION CONTRACT APPROVED BY UNIONS

Men Will Work But Eight Hours Per Day—Law Forbids Exclusion of Non-Union Men—P. J. Reynolds Chosen Registrar of Labor Under the Civil Service Arrangement

At an adjourned meeting of the municipal council yesterday, the contract between the water department and the Charles R. Gow Co. of Boston for the construction of the new filtration plant involving the sum of $24,000, was approved and Patrick J. Reynolds was elected registrar of labor.

The meeting was scheduled to be held in the forenoon, but on account of a conference being held between representatives of labor organization, the members of the council and Mr. Gow of the Charles R. Gow Co., the meeting was postponed to 1:30 o'clock this afternoon. However, it was 2:45 o'clock before Mayor D. J. Murphy called to order.

At the opening of the meeting Commissioner Caradach moved that the council approve a contract with the Charles R. Gow Co. of Boston for the construction of the new filtration plant. The commissioner said the bid of this firm was between $21,000 and $24,000 less than the nearest competitor. He referred to the labor question and said it is impossible to stipulate in the contract that the work be done by union men, because such a move would be illegal. He informed the council the men employed by the Gow Co. for the construction plant will not be requested to work more than eight hours a day. Mr. Caradach said a conference was held this forenoon with labor representatives and Mr. Gow and a satisfactory agreement was reached by all interested, and that the labor representatives were given assurance the work would be done by Lowell men. He said everything possible in accordance with the law is stipulated in the contract.

City solicitor Hennessey said there had been erroneous ideas that certain restrictions could be inserted into the contract. He said there was a similar case in this city some time ago when labor organizations petitioned the council asking that all municipal printing bear the union label, but this, he said, is illegal. He concluded by saying the Gow Co. had furnished bonds to the amount of $45,000 for the performance of the work in a satisfactory manner, and it would be illegal to give the contract to any other company for the fact that the Gow Co. was the lowest bidder.

Mr. Brown said Mr. Gow stated this morning he would pay his laborers $2.25 a day, which, he said, was more than union wages. The motion was put to a vote and was unanimously carried. Then, Mr. Brown spoke of the new position to be created on account of the city laborers being placed on the civil service roll, that to be known as registrar of labor and he moved a ballot be taken for the election of a man to said position, and incidentally Mr. Brown proposed the name of Patrick J. Reynolds, stating the young man is still going to school and this position will help him to carry out his studies. Mr. Reynolds was unanimously elected and the city clerk was instructed to notify the civil service commission of the appointment. Adjournment was taken at 3 o'clock until Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock.

REPUBLICAN PLATFORM

State Convention at Concord Declares for the Establishment of American Merchant Marine

CONCORD, N. H., Sept. 25.—The republican state convention in session here this noon adopted a platform declaring for "heartly approval and co-operation with honest men engaged in business pursuits on the part of the national government; for the re-establishment of the protective principle tariff legislation and the appointment of an expert tariff commission and for the establishment of an American merchant marine." The record of the democratic state administration was assailed, credit for progressive legislation claimed for the republicans of New Hampshire and a pledge given to improve and strengthen all advanced legislation which republican initiative has written into our laws. Proposed amendments were endorsed to the direct primary, employers' liability, fish and game and highway laws and a declaration made in favor of a budget system for public expenditures. Upon the railroad question the platform said: "While the present financial condition of the New Hampshire railroads requires that careful consideration be given to their applications for relief, we are not in favor of an increase of existing mileage rates without further investigation and an adjustment of all railroad rates." An attempt to strike out the last clause of this plank was defeated on a viva voce vote. The closing plank of the platform was an appeal for the union within the republican party of all opposed to "democratic misrule" in state and nation.

The convention was presided over by George H. Moses of Concord recently minister of the United States to Greece and Montenegro and was addressed by former Governor Curtis Guild of Massachusetts and by the leading candidates nominated at the recent republican primary, Rolland H. Shaulding of Rochester for governor, Jacob H. Gallinger of Concord for United States senator, Cyrus A. Sullivan of Manchester and Edward H. Wilson of Nashua for congress.

Its closing business was the election of a new state committee.

PRESIDENT MIGHT ACCEPT A RE-NOMINATION IF IT IS OFFERED TO HIM

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—The following is a copy of Secretary Tamm's letter to Edward Grosvenor, state treasurer of New Jersey, written at the direction of the president, in which the latter declines endorsement for a second term by New Jersey democrats:

"You were generous enough to consult me as to whether the democrats of New Jersey should at this time endorse the president for a second term. I had a talk with the president about it and he deeply appreciates the generosity of the suggestion; but New Jersey is his home state, the men who would act in this matter are his own personal friends and he feels that it might seem as if he were taking advantage of the extraordinary situation now existing to gain some personal advantage through such an expression of confidence by them.

"This would be inconsistent with his whole thought and spirit and he shrinks from it as from something that would embarrass him rather than help him."

MRS. A. ABBOTT HURT

THROWN FROM AUTO ON BRIDGE STREET WHEN HER AUTO SKIDDED

While proceeding along Bridge street yesterday afternoon, a Ford car, owned and driven by Mr. Andrew Abbott of Methuen, skidded and crashed into a Bay State railway post, throwing one of the occupants, Mrs. Abbott against the post. She sustained a laceration of the scalp which necessitated her being removed to St. John's hospital.

It seems that Mr. and Mrs. Abbott were returning from a trip to the mountains. As the machine was being driven along Bridge street, near French street, it skidded and before the driver could place it under control, the auto had turned around, the side striking against the iron post, nearer the post, and she was thrown violently out of the car. The other occupants fortunately escaped injury.

One side of the machine was damaged, a mud guard being badly bent.

OFFER IS RECOMMENDED

BOSTON, Sept. 25.—Confirmation of the offer of 15 1/2 per cent, which Thomas F. Kelley, mortgage manufacturer of Lynn, made to creditors, was recommended by Referee William F. Perry, in a report filed in federal court today. The referee previously had reported against confirmation of the offer on the ground that Mr. Kelley had obtained money and credit from the New England Trust Co., by means of a false statement as to his financial condition. Mr. Kelley contended that the statement was true and investigation made at his request substantiated his statement. Referee Perry in reporting that the bankruptcy court should be confirmed, said he still "was of the opinion that the bankrupt treated the New England Trust Co. unfairly."

In support of his offer, Mr. Kelley has deposited $232,012 with the court, which will be distributed among his creditors as soon as Judge Morton confirms the offer.

INSPECTOR MASTERS IS SAID TO HAVE MORE CASES ON HAND

The milk dealers who have appeared in the police court recently will soon have a chance to shake hands and sympathize with the majority of the restaurant keepers and proprietors of lunch carts in Lowell if the persistent rumors which are now afloat prove true. The office of the local milk inspector has been very active of late and their activities are said to have not been solely confined to the wares of the milkmen. With "Nixey" Coughlin as collector and Melvin Masters as analyzer the police court animals are shortly to be flooded, it is said, with a number of complaints against lunch counters and restaurants.

STROYMAN IS HELD

ROUND OVER FOR SUPERIOR COURT AT LYNN—WANTED IN BOSTON

David Stroyman, the man who was arrested Thursday at Barry's shoe shop on a warrant charging him with receiving stolen goods, was arraigned in the Lynn court this morning and held for the grand jury. The Lynn chief of police called upon Supt. Welch by telephone this afternoon and informed him that the Boston police, as well as the New York authorities, want Stroyman as soon as he is through serving the sentence, which is probably awaiting him at the hands of the Lynn court. The charge against Stroyman in Boston is uttering and forging worthless checks. An indictment has already been secured against him in New York on a similar charge.

RECOUNT SHOWS TIE

BOSTON, Sept. 25.—Announcement today of the result of a recount yesterday of a vote cast for members of the legislative committee of the state branch, American Federation of Labor, showed a tie between two candidates for the third place on the committee. John P. Mead of Brockton was declared elected yesterday morning, only to lose on a recount later in the day, when Fred J. Kneeland of Boston had an apparent majority of one vote, and was given the place. Today's recount showed that both men were tied at 11 votes. Kneeland then arose and moved that Mead be declared elected and this motion was carried.

CHARGED WITH MANSLAUGHTER

SALFORD, Sept. 25.—John S. Murphy, a contractor, and Thomas H. Veno of Wenhams, a motorist, members of the crews of two street cars which figured in a collision in which three men were killed at Wenhams, a week ago, were charged with manslaughter in the district court today. Their case will be continued until Oct. 2, the men being held in $2000 bonds.

GUBERNATORIAL CAMPAIGN

BOSTON, Sept. 25.—The republican gubernatorial campaign will get actively under way shortly after the state convention which is to be held at Worcester on Oct. 3. Chairman Edward A. Thurston of the state committee announced today. The first meeting will be at Provincetown. Those immediately following will be at Fall River, New Bedford, Taunton and Brockton.

Samuel McCall, candidate for governor, will speak only in the larger cities of the state, Mr. Thurston said.

YOUNG LOWELL SAILOR HONORED

James L. Tully Tendered Farewell Reception at His Home

Had Served in Mexico and Reenlists for Further Service in Navy

JAMES L. TULLY, U. S. S. Michigan.

Mr. James L. Tully, a former member of Uncle Sam's fighting forces aboard the U. S. S. Michigan, who saw service in the Mexican outbreak will leave Monday to enter on his second enlistment in the navy. As a result a large party of friends called at his home in chestnut street Thursday and tendered the young man a farewell reception and as a token of their high esteem presented him a beautiful signal ring.

The presentation speech was made by Mr. Michael Sullivan, who in fitting terms told of the many good qualities possessed by the young man.

Mr. Tully, although much by surprise, responded gracefully and thanked his friends saying that their gift was highly appreciated and would always be remembered. He was then asked to relate some of the incidents that occurred during his stay in Mexico, which he did in a very pleasing manner.

He said that his eight months' stay in Mexico, for the Michigan, on which he was stationed, cruised about in Mexican waters long before the war broke out, and always recall many pleasant memories. Just after the war broke out, he said, everything was full of excitement. Every man aboard imbued that fighting spirit characteristic of full blooded Americans and wanted to go in immediately to tear the "gringos" as he called them, to pieces. At night the bugle call, which in the regular routine day did not seem of much importance, were fully realized, and helped instill the fighting spirit in the men and kept them on edge all the time. Although he did not take part in any active fighting he did a lot of shore duty and made a thorough study of the Mexican people and their customs.

"This country will have to keep a close watch on Mexico for a long time," he said, "and eventually it will have to step in and take charge as it did in Cuba and the Philippines. To conquer Mexico would be a hard job. The country is overrun with thieving parties and they would have a decided advantage if it came to war. The country is unsuited to any but guerrilla warfare. I saw General Villa once, and believe me I will always remember that face. It was enough to scare anyone away. The masses do not know anything and they can be easily excited to revolt by their leaders such as Carranza and Villa, who are much better schooled."

Speaking of Vera Cruz, he told his audience that it was one of the most beautiful cities he had ever seen. He was loudly applauded at the close of his remarks.

The following young people followed Mr. Tully with songs and recitations: Michael Sullivan, Wallace Morris, John Shields, Martin Brick, Dr. Owen Conway, John Granfield, Paul Chappello, Raymond Fox, James Tully, Eleanor Buckley, Lena Wrenn, Alice Calase, Mary O'Leary, Nora McNamara, and Mary Conley.

Refreshments were served by the following young ladies: Mary O'Leary, Bessie Tully and Nora Moloney.

Mr. Charles Thomas and Mr. Alonzo Wyman had charge of the affair and to their untiring efforts can be attributed the success and enjoyment of the occasion.

MILLINERY ATTRACTIONS, AND THIS YEAR LIKE

AIKEN STREET SEWER

The extension of the Aiken street sewer is but a very slight feat of engineering compared with some things which the city has done, is now doing, or is about to do, but nevertheless in effect it is a far-reaching innovation and one that will have no slight part in improving the sanitary conditions of the community. Its completion must bring a feeling of reassurance to the populous section in the vicinity, for though the work in itself is comparatively slight, its continued neglect might easily have led to very serious results.

So far as the sewer outlets on the Merrimack river are concerned Lowell need not fear outside investigation. On more than one occasion the state authorities have commented on the fact that this city has shown greater zeal and judgment than any other community along the Merrimack valley in this most important particular. Owing to the great difference in water altitudes at different seasons, some of the sewer outlets—even those built out into the river—were above the water level in the summer, with the result that they were plainly obnoxious at times and always a fruitful source of danger. To follow the progress made of late years in sewage disposal would be to read of community infection in every form of contagious disease. It is the part of prudence for the city to anticipate the slightest wish of the state board of health in anything connected with sewage at all times, thus ensuring to the city immunity from almost certain disease infection.

It is no secret that the Concord river within the city limits affords the strongest possible contrast to the Merrimack river in all that relates to sewers and drainage. Not only the city sewers along the Merrimack but the mills and manufacturing plants have been attended to so that possible pollution is reduced to a minimum. Along the Concord many manufacturing plants turn all manner of noxious refuse into the filthy stream, and it is used as an open sewer also by many of the more undesirable tenement blocks and ramshackle residences along its banks. Sometimes the odor from the river bed is almost unbearable as those know who are compelled to use the Anderson street bridge, and it is surprising that the region through which the much abused river flows does not suffer more from certain diseases.

About a year ago a bill was introduced into the legislature by a local representative for the purpose of having the Concord dredged, and though it did not meet with legislative favor it brought the necessity for this improvement strongly home to the people of Lowell. There is such an accumulation of all manner of stationary refuse in the channel that no mere sewer improvement or regulations concerning the waste from the manufacturing plants would be adequate to ensure cleanliness, but civic sanitation would be served by such restrictions following a thorough dredging and purifying of the river bed.

This cannot be done without the expenditure of some money, but there is an economy that is more costly than extravagance. If, after one, two or five years an epidemic broke out in the region of Lawrence and Church streets or in lower Belvidere, the ultimate cost might easily surpass the amount needed to make the Concord sanitary. It is a beautiful river and public sanitation and decency demand that it be made a clean river. Now that we have done so well with regard to the Merrimack within the city limits, why not go seriously to work to improve the Concord? The same incentive holds good and the suggested project is by no means of secondary importance.

THE COTTON CRISIS

Though at first glance it may seem contradictory, the war which is expected to usher in such a great boom eventually for the textile business—especially the cotton manufacturing end of it—has created a serious situation for the cotton producer. As a result we have a well defined cotton crisis, to overcome which many wise individuals from the head of the government to the inconspicuous individual in our industrial communities are exerting themselves. The strongest manifestation of this general desire to help is shown in the "buy-a-bale-of-cotton" movement which has been started by far-seeing business men with the official and unofficial approval of President Wilson and the other administration heads.

The situation is this: All of the European countries engaged in the gigantic war have been hitherto our customers, buying more of the raw cotton grown in America than was used by our own mills. This year there has been an unusually good crop and the cotton growers and selling agents would have reaped a great harvest were it not for the struggle abroad which has temporarily destroyed the foreign market and left our cotton growers with a large supply on their hands. Most of this they cannot get rid of, unless they are willing to cut down their prices to such a low figure that all profits will be eliminated.

The war had scarcely started when Texas felt the pinch; her great crop was without a market; now all the cotton growing states are in dire distress. No adequate provisions have been made for storing on a large scale and though everything possible is being done by the states, the planters and the federal government, the entire cotton industry is threatened with bankruptcy. As is to be expected, speculators are already banking on the necessity of the south and there is the possibility that the cotton may be at most given away.

The "buy-a-bale-of-cotton" movement has been started to offset this danger and to keep the cotton growers from ruin. Those who agitate it suggest that thousands of individuals in all parts of the country buy at least one bale of cotton at the normal figure, thus partially making up for the shortage in the foreign market and preventing the ruin that may or may not be inevitable. Cotton of a good variety sells now at 10 cents the pound or 500 per ton, and it is certain that if the present emergency can be lifted over, the price will rise proportionately.

Honors to the coming demand. Those who respond to the call of the south and show their practical sympathy by buying a bale of cotton may feel assured that money so spent will be well invested and will return with interest next season.

The very fact that France, Germany, Belgium and to a lesser extent England have bought no cotton from us this year is the strongest indication of the stagnation in foreign manufactures that will follow the war. The various countries will be impoverished; they will have lost their best workers; they will be confronted with all manner of internal demands and will lack industrial initiative. From all over the world will come strong demands for the products of the cotton looms and America will get the lion's share of the resultant business. Consequently there will be a greater demand in our own country for raw cotton, and there will be a renewed demand in other countries that the paralyzed industries may be revived. If the American planter can only be aided to surmount this time of adversity, it would seem that prosperity to an unprecedented degree booms ahead. In this prospect the boys who have bought a bale or bales of cotton may take a pardonable pride as well as a practical share to some slight extent. The new cotton movement should appeal to the patriotism as well as to the business instinct of prudent Americans.

OBSTACLES TO PEACE

So long as militarism is the dominant European policy so long will peace be deferred, and in this respect it is difficult to say which nation is the worst offender. At least, no nation has a monopoly on the militarist policy. Since the war began, apologists for England and France declare that Germany must be crushed in order that militarism may be put down and Germany applies the same argument regarding its enemies. Thus public opinion in all these countries agrees that the death of militarism will usher in the dawn of peace, but when it comes to a practical application of the remedy, all nations are

STOP THAT FIRST FALL COUGH. Check your fall cough or cold at once—don't wait—it may lead to serious lung trouble, weaken your vitality and develop a chronic lung ailment. It will relieve quickly and permanently. It soothes the irritated throat, lungs and air passages. It cures the system against colds. It surely prevents cold germs from getting a hold. found to offend to a more or less degree.

It is a mistake to suppose that the present war will, per se, stop the militarist propaganda which endangers the peace of Europe permanently. In the published declaration of Germany's official attitude some days ago it was plainly hinted that should the allies fight on to the finish and crush German aspirations, Germany will straightway begin to train its people with the intention of returning the blow at the first possible opportunity. Peace lovers see little in this outlook on which to base their hope of a better and brighter time.

The death of militarism will come, not from any action taken by governments but from the birth of a better spirit in the masses. Today, the multitude is easily inflamed and king, kaiser and czar may plot and counterplot at will, knowing that they can lead their subjects as the baker kneads dough. Some time when all people realize what the people of young America realized viz: that all real power is vested in the people, the murderous militarist policy will disappear and a more enlightened world can plan for some practical method of ensuring universal peace.

LABOR BOARD

Mr. John Golden may have an excellent reason for resigning from the state board of labor and industries, but the rather meagre explanation given for his action does not seem to fully justify it. In all boards of the kind there must be a wide difference of opinion and it is only by different viewpoints as impersonated by individuals that public questions may be solved in any except a one-sided way. It is inevitable that Mr. Golden should be thrown with men just as earnest as himself and with as great a zeal to serve the public, though possibly seeing things in an altogether different light. His suggestion that all matters affecting state labor problems should be acted on by a board of one, and that one hearing the union card, testifies to his confidence in his cause but does not commend his judgment. The ideal labor board from the public point of view is not the labor board which Mr. Golden would like to see in operation.

PANAMA-PACIFIC EXPOSITION

In a statement given to the press a day or so ago Secretary Bryan announced that the European war will not compel the postponement of the Panama-Pacific exposition or result in the withdrawal of any of the nations which had signified their intention of participating. The government has been officially notified by 37 foreign governments of their intention to take part, and even private business concerns in England and Germany will contribute, according to their original plans. The statement of the secretary is most optimistic, but still there is such a close connection between war and business that some eclipse of the great exposition seems inevitable.

As an American institution and as it affects domestic matters, the exposition will be uninjured by European conditions. Forty-six states have signified their intention of participating and most elaborate plans are being perfected to make the affair worthy of the event it commemorates. South America, too, is alive to the possibilities of the great bazaar, according to Secretary Bryan, who, among other facts, says that one of the South American governments has increased the amount of its subscription for the exposition since the war began and that all of them are regarding it as an opportunity to extend their commerce. In this respect our own government is not liable to be found wanting.

FOR DEMOCRATIC VICTORY

So far as New England has been able to judge, the political trend of this part of the country will vindicate the national administration, for national politics has been made the local issue wherever there has been any contest—whether resultant victory for President Wilson and his supporters. From now until election time many men of many minds will agitate political questions of more or less local importance but behind all is the fact that a democratic victory will be accepted as a vote of confidence in the national administration which deserves it richly. The democratic party has achieved great things while in power and it is about to achieve many other things which must eventually react favorably on general conditions in this country. Maine has shown the way the wind is blowing and it behooves Massachusetts Democrats to work with a will so that a democratic victory may spur on the administration to greater effort.

A Ruelson Boy may find some consolation in the fact that he has the last word, but on his trip back to Turkey must come the realization that what he gained in debate, he lost in diplomacy. The successful diplomat, whether in the light of his own nationality or that he has offended, is the one that listens much and says little or nothing.

THE BUILDING OPERATIONS

Contractors Busy Finishing up Jobs on Hand—The Real Estate Transactions

At the present time the building operations throughout the city consist mainly of minor repairs and progress on large jobs well underway. The contractors engaged on house construction are hustling to have the work completed before the cold weather sets in.

Local Building Operations
On next Friday bids will be accepted for the heating and ventilating of the new high school annex in Kirk street, recently acquired by the city. It will be necessary to install the direct and indirect system of heating and ventilating in this building.

Extensive alterations are now in progress in the annex, and when the work is completed, the new addition to the city's educational accommodations will be fully equipped to relieve the congestion which now exists in the high school.

One half of the building is to be made into eight class rooms, and an addition will be built on the old portion. The old partitions have been torn down and the interior is studied for the partitioning of the plan to provide for the large number of pupils. It has been estimated that the annex will accommodate 200 or more students in a satisfactory manner.

The work is coming ahead rapidly, and will be completed within a reasonably short space of time. When the building is ready, the high school will go back to its former place of education at the institution will be carried on smoothly and effectively under the improved conditions.

Mr. Edward A. Simpson has planned to reconstruct his property at 150 North street, converting the present structure into separate dwellings. To accomplish this the old part of the building will be moved to Wyman street, and the new building will be erected on the site. The new building will be a two-story structure, with a modern interior, and will be equipped with all the latest conveniences. The present building contains 18 rooms.

Oliver Clement is going to build an up-to-date blacksmith shop at 51 Allen avenue, and his permit is now filed at city hall. The new shop is to have, among other modern features, a cement foundation.

A new eight room dwelling house is to be constructed by Mrs. L. Beharrell at 18 Davenport terrace. The dwelling will be built according to the latest plans and will contain pantry and bath with full equipment.

PICKING UP NEW METHODS
A great many builders, contractors and dealers are only progressing by observing what others have done, and following their lead. Whether it be machinery, tools, appliances, methods or wages, a few contractors must take the lead before the great majority will follow. The equipment of one shop with electric power always leaves half a dozen others in the neighborhood to do the same, while the use of hoisting engines, derricks, patent scaffolding, etc., quickly shows other contractors how they can save and make money.

The use of motor trucks was, until a few years ago, looked upon as something of a novelty or a fad, the manufacturer predicting that in a few years no horses would be seen, while the contractor was waiting to see how successful the trucks were in the hands of others before he made an investment. Today when the truck has not removed the horse entirely from our streets yet it has found its place and is now looked upon as a necessity to the contractor who wishes to keep up with his competitors. The motor truck is a necessity to carry on his business, whether it be hangarwork in the suburbs, farm buildings or city structures.

CLEANING THE BRUSHES

SOME VALUABLE INFORMATION REGARDING THE METHODS OF CLEANING PAINT BRUSHES

Obviously good painting or varnishing cannot be done with unclean pots and brushes. In the first place I would say, keep them clean. Do not allow them to get dirty. In warm weather paint will be apt to gum up brush and pot if too much driers are used, and there always is, even in cold and wet weather. But this is another story.

Well regulated paint shops have a barrel of strong soda or lye water, in which dirty paint pots are placed and after soaking a few days are taken out, scraped, the scrapings saved, and the pot made clean with water and rag or waste. Another method is by fire; place some paper or excelsior in the pot, sprinkle a little coal oil over it, and set fire to it; do this over and over until the brush is clean. With care the soldering will not be injured. Scrape with a putty knife as the heat softens the old paint, and do the inside first, scraping down into the slight blaze until the insides are done, then remove the outside stuff. This takes a very little time, and is useful when one does not have time to wait on the action of the lye barrel.

As to the dirty paint brush, there are various ways for cleaning it. Any fluid that will dissolve oil will clean the brush. Ammonia water, creosote oil, alkali water, hot water, etc. Some use the liquid known as paint and varnish remover, but this is very expensive (though it ought not to be, as it is composed of a cheap material), besides which it injures the bristles, taking the life or spring out of the bristles, making the brush stiff and too soft to work well. When the paint is very thick and hard on the outer bristles, do not cut these bristles away, as is too often done, but soften up the old paint, then scrape it away. Benzine and naphtha gum up oil paint, hence are not really good for cleaning the paint brush. If the brush is hard all through, then soak it in dilute ammonia or hot water, then place in turpentine and finally wash with soap and water. Or by making a paste with washing powder and covering the bristles with it, leaving it on over night, the old paint will be softened up. Or soak in turpentine and wash out with soap and water, then rinse in clear water, then twist the brush between the hands to expel the water. Some recommend the use of hot water, after which rinse in ammonia water. Before placing a brush in any hot solution wrap it in paper, to preserve its shape, hang the dirty brush in hot water, not allowing the water to be above the bottom of the ferrule, and after the bristles have become loose from paint work same with the fingers, separating the bristles as much as possible. Repeat the hot water treatment, making the bristles of the brush hard softened. Next place the brush in turpentine to soak a few hours, then take it out and work it out with a putty knife, removing the loose paint. If still there is hard or only partly softened paint, place the brush in some strong soap suds and boil until old paint is soft. Heat or hot water is a great softener of paint.

When I have hot or warmed up paint, I want to mix up a pot of paint, I take the hard paint out of the keg in small bits and place it in the mixing pot, then pour boiling water on it until the hard pigment is covered; I set the pot away for anywhere from 15 minutes to an hour, as it does not require a very long time, and then the humps of lead or zinc are quite soft and may easily be mixed up with oil or turpentine in the usual way. I don't think many know of this little trick, and I only stumbled across it myself, experimenting one day. Old paint, dried on pot or brush will not soften up as quickly as the hard lead, yet with boiling and time it will, particularly when assisted with a little alkali.

When a varnish brush gets foul the old stuff is best removed by soaking in varnish remover. As this liquid evaporates very rapidly it is best to have a can that may be covered during the operation. While the liquid may have some bad effect on the bristles, yet as varnish aids in stiffening the bristles it does not matter much. Turpentine, and all varnish is pronounced as containing a certain amount of stiffener on bristles, so that it is advised when your paint brush becomes flabby from being too long in water that it be used in turpentine paint or stain for a time.

When done with paint brushes for the day or time being, remove all paint from it by wiping it against the edge of painting or put in a little turpentine paint from ferrule and handle, before putting it away. Water is usually employed for keeping paint brushes in, but if the brush is simply wrapped with wet paper or muslin it will not become dry over night, and the bristles will be in better condition than if kept in water. If done with the brush for a reason, better clean it with benzine and possibly with soap and water, let it dry perfectly, then place in a drawer or cupboard until again needed. Nothing ruins a brush like soaking in water for a long time.—A. Ashman Kelly in The National Builder.

SCHOOL ARCHITECTURE

One department of architecture in which great progress has been made of recent years is that of school building. There are many points of difference between the school of today and that of 30 years ago. A school opened recently is essentially modern in its building and equipment. The building is a quadrangle, with a cloister all around it on the inside, and in the center is the assembly hall, rectangular in plan. Around the quadrangle are ten class-rooms, accommodating from 20 to 30 pupils each. All the teaching rooms have two opposite walls exposed to the air. By putting windows in these walls through ventilation is obtained, and so far as present knowledge goes through ventilation is the most economical, the simplest, and the best means of providing fresh air. The windows are provided with protected hoppers at the bottom and swing lights above. The hoppers are so arranged that the air is bound to travel upward and diffuse before reaching the room, thus avoiding unpleasant draughts. There is a good deal of color in the building, and the hall is adorned with seven stained glass windows.

But in the construction of buildings in which various colored stones are used afford the opportunity for the architect and builder to obtain pleasing effects by the use of stained or tinted mortar and cement. For this purpose, as well as in pressed brick construction, stains of red, brown, buff and blue are now much used. The coloring material employed should be unaffected by the atmospheric changes and have no influence on the strength or durability of the mortar, containing neither oil, gas, nor salts, the latter being apt to increase the white deposit common to brick fronts. Colors around in the form of paint will be the most practical, as they are easily and give uniformity of color.—National Builder for September.

This page is to be published each week and will be devoted solely to the interests of the real estate and building field, including, naturally, the various other related trades, such as furniture dealers, storage, and all who have anything to do with the buying, selling, erecting, or equipping the interior or exterior of a home, a business block, or any other structure.

Doubtless the men in business in these various fields have a time item of interest regarding their activity, or some particular phase of the business, and The Sun invites them to send these in for publication. All contributions to this page should be left at The Sun office no later than Thursday evening of each week, in order that they may be reviewed and ready for publication on the Real Estate and Builders' page on the Saturday following.

It has been the aim of this paper in introducing this weekly feature to establish a direct medium of communication between the men in the real estate and building trades and the general public, and promote the advantages of both. People seeking information concerning where to find property of a certain nature or to whom to go to have certain alterations performed or a building equipped, will find The Sun's new weekly feature a great help.

Advertisements should be received no later than Thursday evening in order to be in time for publication on Saturday. Telephone 4100 and have your advertisement start with the next issue, if you were not in at the start.

SLEEPYTIME TALES

FOR LITTLE READERS OF THE SUN

MARY'S SNOW STARS

Once upon a time a little girl named Mary was sitting in her high chair, for she was only three years old, looking out of the window. Her father came in and told her mother it was getting very damp and cold out and he thought it was going to snow.

Sure enough, pretty soon it began to snow hard. Now Mary had never noticed the snow before, but today she sat in her high chair and cooed at the flakes as they beat against the window-pane.

"See pretty stars!" she cried, "Baby want pretty stars!" Big brother Joe was playing on the floor with his blocks. "Stars in the daytime?" he said, "I must see them," and he jumped up and ran to the window. "They ain't stars, they's just snow."

Mary looked blank, so big brother Joe went on to explain. "That's snow—s-n-o-w. We had a lesson about that this morning in school. Snow is frozen water," he said, proud of his knowledge and hoping he was quoting his teacher correctly. "When it wants to rain, and the weather is too cold, the water goes together in little pieces and falls down in the shape of snow. Snow has many shapes, Mary."

"See this one!" and Joe pointed at a very beautiful star that had just fallen on the window. "And to prove that it is water after all, watch it melt and run down the glass."

Mary opened her big blue eyes wider and answered. "Oh, yes," although the answer might have been "No" for all she understood.

Joe was pleased at the interest she was taking, so he went on:

"When a lot of these stars fall on the ground, and it is cold enough so that they won't melt, then the snow lies and little boys and girls go sled riding."

"Me want ride," cried little Mary.

"I'll ask mother whether I may take you," he said, and ran to get permission.

Mother was doubtful at first, as Mary had never been out on a rough day. The snow was falling fast, and the wind was howling, but by and by she said he could in the morning when it would be nice and clear and that they could have all the fun they wanted.

"That'll do," said Joe cheerfully, "Tomorrow is Saturday and we have no school."

Next morning little Mary was bundled up in her warm wraps and tied to the sled.

THE BRITISH SUBMARINES

Blockade the Elbe—Entrance to Kiel Canal is Under Watch of Torpedo Craft

LONDON, Sept. 26.—When Winston Spencer Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, summarized for an Italian correspondent, as published yesterday, the practical results of England's command of the sea, he let slip the first definite information on the pressure that the British fleet is exerting along the coast of Germany.

"Our submarines are blockading the very throat of the Elbe," was all he would say of the actual operations. But the public takes this as indicating that the grand fleet has by no means lain inactive, though its doings, almost as much as Admiral Sir John Jellicoe's plans of campaign, are kept under cover with remarkable success.

Instead of contenting himself with a general blockading position on the high sea, the British commander has his scouts at the very entrance to the Kiel canal itself.

English Inside German Lines

The only regular engagement by portions of the fleet, when five German warships were sunk, occurred near the island of Heligoland which lies 35 to 40 miles out in the North sea from the nearest cape of the indented German shore. Heligoland has been made a strong outpost of Germany's naval base.

Hence the English submarines, at least, are maintaining a position far inside that first line of defense. If any other parts of the British fleet have ventured so close to Germany's naval stronghold, no inkling of it has been let out. But it is presumed a supporting squadron is within reasonable call of the little underwater fighters.

The mouth of the Elbe river estuary, some 15 to 20 miles wide, is about 7 miles distant from Heligoland. Cuxhaven, an important port on the North sea at the southern limit of the Elbe mouth, lies 65 miles from Heligoland.

Great Ports Far Inland
Brunsbüttel, on the north shore of the Elbe and close to the canal entrance, is 80 miles east-southeast of Heligoland. Hamburg, on the Elbe, is 85 miles by air from Brunsbüttel and fully 100 miles by the channel. Bremen, the other great port of Germany, likewise enjoys the protection of a long river course against a sea attack, being 55 miles south-southeast of Brunsbüttel, on the Weser. This river empties into the North sea some 25 miles southeast of the Elbe.

Hence attacks on these ports by sea are almost out of the question. Submarine blockaders at the river mouth, however, not only can bottle them up, but are in position to interfere with warships using the Kiel canal entrance.

Meanwhile the grand fleet, said to number 200 warships, is steaming up and down the coast, as Lord St. Vincent, in fair weather and foul, kept the sea in front of Boulogne and prevented Napoleon's fleet and 300,000 veteran troops from invading England.

ASQUITH ASKS

IRISH TO FIGHT

Hearty Greeting Extended the Premier in Dublin Last Night

Nationalist Volunteers Appear as Guard of Honor

DUBLIN, via London, Sept. 26.—Premier Asquith appeared at the Mansion house here last night for the purpose, as he expressed it in the opening of his speech, "as the head of the king's government to summon loyal and patriotic Ireland to take her place in defense of our common cause."

The prime minister received a tremendous welcome when he appeared at the Mansion house with John E. Redmond, the Irish nationalist leader, and the Earl of Aberdeen, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, and his opening words aroused the greatest enthusiasm.

As he went on to say that there had been wars with regard to which there was a diversity of opinion, but that was not the case today.

Today, he declared, throughout the empire, without distinction of creed, party or race, climate or class or section, the people were united in defending the principle of maintaining international peace which were vital, not only to the British Empire but to all that was worth having in our common civilization and the future progress of mankind, whether Great Britain succeeded or failed.

"But," he exclaimed, "we are not going to fail! There could not be any higher cause, said the premier, than the vindication of international good faith and protection of the weak against the violence of the strong, and those who preached a practical religion of force. Germany was the real responsible factor in this war."

There was nothing in the quarrel, such as it was, between Austria and Serbia that could not be settled by peaceful means, but for the fact that, in the judgment of those guiding and controlling the German policy, the hour had come to strike the blow which had long been deliberately prepared.

In their hands, declared Mr. Asquith, lay the choice between peace and war and their election was for war.

"The invasion of Belgium and France," said the prime minister, "constituted the blackest pages of war's somber history. England had worked to the last for peace. 'The old animosities are dead. What Great Britain asks, what she believes Ireland is ready and eager to give,' he said, 'is a free will offering of free people.'

Great Britain, who followed said he, had promised the archbishop of Malines that Ireland would bring her arms and strength to avenge Louvain. "It is Ireland's duty to fight," declared the Irish nationalist leader. "Great Britain has kept faith with Ireland and Ireland will keep faith with Great Britain."

Crowds gathered in the streets of Dublin and cheered the Nationalist Volunteers, who, armed with rifles and bayonets, acted as a guard of honor.

PRISONERS AT

ISLAND CLASH

George F. Crosby Hit Over Head With Heavy Hammer

Deer Island, Like Lowell, Has Paving Block Trouble

BOSTON, Sept. 26.—A difference of opinion over the "correct manner of cutting paving blocks resulted in a fight between two prisoners at the house of correction at Deer Island yesterday forenoon, and as a result of an alleged attack upon him by Arthur Dean, George F. Crosby is in the Deer Island hospital in a critical condition, suffering from a lacerated scalp wound and a fracture of the skull.

Dean, who was sentenced to the house of correction on Sept. 1 for nine months, lived at 1076 Washington street at the time of his arrest. He is about 28 years old. Crosby, who is also about 28, lived at 140 Sargent street, Roxbury, and was sentenced to six months' imprisonment on Sept. 14 on a charge of nonpayment.

Yesterday forenoon Dean and Crosby, both of whom were assigned to the stone cutting shed, became involved in an argument over the proper manner of cutting paving blocks. It is claimed Dean assailed to explain how the work should be done, but that Crosby was obdurate and that Dean, in a fit of anger, finally attacked Crosby with a heavy hammer, or maul, used for cutting stone.

Before any of the other prisoners, or the guards on duty in the stone shed could interfere, Dean is alleged to have dealt Crosby a heavy blow with the heavy tool, and the latter fell unconscious.

Immediately there was great excitement among the other prisoners, but the officers succeeded in rushing Dean to that part of the institution known as the "plant," and the hospital ambulance was called to convey Crosby to the hospital, where the physicians declared him to be in a critical condition and ordered his name placed upon the dangerous list. The institution officials notified Crosby's wife of his condition.

Last night Penal Institution Commissioner Fred S. Gore said that an investigation had been begun in regard to the matter and that Dean, the alleged assailant, would be kept in his cell until a thorough investigation had been made, or until such time as Crosby's condition will permit of the officials securing his version of the attack.

CHAMPION DANCING MEET

OF MERRIMACK VALLEY TO BE HELD AT ASSOCIATE HALL WEDNESDAY EVENING

For a long time the champion exhibition dancer has been in dispute. The dancing people of Lawrence claimed Mr. Maguire and partner held the title; Nashua claimed Mr. Moran and partner held the title; Boston also had several claimants, likewise Lowell and Haverhill. The management decided it was about time for the dancing public to know who was the real champion of the Merrimack valley. Lowell dancers have held their own in events of this kind and having several likely candidates for the title in Mr. Deane Heslin and partner, Mr. Sheehan and partner, Mr. Shurue and partner, Mr. Harry McWilliams and partner, the other cities mentioned will no doubt have a hard time in wresting the title from the Lowell dancers. The management says this contest will be the largest and best ever held in New England. The silver cup prize is exhibited in Kirtland's window.

The managers have gone to great expense and have signed contracts with 15 of the best singers from all over New England to come here and furnish an entertainment with new and novel features rarely ever seen at a popular priced affair.

BIG BATTLE RAGES

WATER DEPT. WORK
NOW BEING PUSHED

Contractor Gow Starts in Monday Morning—Examination for the Teachers—Additional Clerks Writing Tax Bills

Over fifty more men will be discharged from the water department next week, according to Supt. Thomas. The working force at the construction of the new filtration plant which is now 87 will be reduced to about 50 this afternoon, while some 20 men who for the past week or so have been employed on the extension of an eight-inch pipe to connect the water main to a new house in Daniels street, will also be laid off sometime next week or as soon as the job is finished.

Supt. Thomas stated this morning the department is now waiting for cast iron pipes which were shipped several days ago and as soon as the pipes arrive a number of the men who were laid off will be put back to work.

The Charles E. Gow Co. of Boston, given the contract for the construction of the new filtration plant, will start work Monday. The paraphernalia of the company will arrive on the scene early Monday morning and a gang of men, possibly former employees of the water department will be put to work on rigging up the machinery. In the course of a few days several Lowell men will be put to work and the job will be rushed along.

Cleaning the Main

The National Water Main Cleaning Co. of New York, which was given the contract for the cleaning of the 21-inch water main extending from the pumping station on the boulevard to the corner of Starbird street and Varum avenue, has completed its task. In order to clean this main it was necessary to cut it open and insert a machine which was pushed through the large pipe by means of water vacuum. The cost of cleaning this main amounted to $1500 and it took the company about five days to do the work.

Examination for Teachers

Seventeen applicants for positions as teachers and principals in the evening elementary schools took an examination today in the high school building. The examination was started at 8:30 o'clock and continued until 11:30. The examination was held under the direction of Supt. Molloy. Principal Cyrus W. Irish of the high school, and Charles W. Morley, master of the Highland school.

Additional Clerks

The work of writing the tax bills of Lowell will cost the city more money this year than in any other previous year on account of additional clerks appointed by Commissioner Brown some time ago. In the past seven or eight men wrote out tax bills and distributed them in the various wards, but this year fifteen names appear on that particular payroll. Fourteen of the clerks write out the bills and another party delivers them about the city. The clerks are being paid $15 a week, which makes the payroll higher by about $125 a week. Those employed in writing tax bills are William F. Boyle, Thomas Mullaney, Charles A. Donahue, Jesse Grant, John A. O'Connor, Jennie Locke, Rose Letourneau, Thomas F. Bessett, Cornelius J. O'Neill, William L. Crowley, Margaret C. Long, John McManus, Jr., Joseph Tobin and Patrick Brown, while Michael Brady delivers the papers. These clerks are employed by the treasurer's department. The work was started earlier this year, the clerks getting their information from the assessors' books.

ing about the park department, the badges for the park commissioners have arrived and are now being safely kept in the office of the department at city hall.

Five badges, one for each commissioner have been received, but it is stated that one is missing, and it is probable new badges will be ordered, for it is feared the fifth badge has been stolen and the party who has this precious piece of jewelry in his possession may represent himself as a park commissioner and Commissioner Rountree would not at all be pleased to hear of an impostor wearing the official badge.

It may be well to inform the public that the badges have not yet been distributed and may not be until the first meeting of the commissioners, which will be in a couple of weeks. It was stated this morning that an appropriate program will be prepared for the occasion and the official planning of the badges on the commissioners will be made by the head of the department, Commissioner Donnelly, who it is said, will also take part in the musical program to follow the ceremony.

A lady clerk at city hall, who is quite a French scholar, had occasion to use her knowledge of this language yesterday, when a young girl who was unable to speak the English language called at her office for information. The clerk endeavored to make herself understood in English, but her efforts were fruitless. Inasmuch as this clerk can speak but little French, she had recourse to the pencil, for she is a clever French writer and in this manner a long interview was held between the two parties interested and with much success. The city hall clerk will now get to work on learning how to speak the French language, for she realizes it is very handy at times to be a linguist.

FRENCH STILL STRIVING TO OUTFLANK VON KLUCK

Fierce Fighting in the Region of Noyon—Allies Make Slight Advance—Fresh Troops Hammering at German Right Wing—French Line Forced Back—Russians Prepare to Attack City of Cracow in Galicia—Inhabitants Reported to be Fleeing

A battle of extraordinary severity is raging at the western end of the Anglo-French and German battle line in the region of Noyon, 60 miles to the north of Paris, where the French still are striving to outflank General Von Kluck's reinforced army. The French official statement issued this afternoon claims that the allied troops have made a slight advance.

On the eastern end of the fighting line the French officially admit that their line has been forced back by the Germans across the river Meuse near St. Mihiel, a point about 20 miles to the south of the French fortress of Verdun.

In the eastern arena the Russians are preparing to attack the important Austrian fortified city of Cracow in Galicia. The inhabitants of the city are reported to be fleeing and the civil government is said to have been assumed by the Germans.

Russians operating against the fortress of Przemyśl have captured two towns to the north and south of the position and have completely cut off its railway communication.

The French ministry of marine today announced that a landing force from the gunboat Surprise has hoisted the French flag over Coco Beach in the German colony of Kamerun, in Africa.

British forces from the Union of South Africa, have occupied Luderitzbucht, a town in German southwest Africa, where the Germans retreated after blowing up the railroad.

China has protested against the occupation by Japanese troops of Wei-Hsien, a town of Shantung province outside the zone set apart by the Chinese government for the Japanese military operations against the German concession of Kiao Chow.

RUSSIANS CAPTURE RZESZOW ON THE RAILROAD LEADING TO CRACOW

Heavy fighting is going on at both the east and west wings in the battle between the Germans and allies in France, according to the official announcement issued this afternoon by the French war department.

The following is the text of the communication.

First—On our left wing, between Somme and the Oise the battle continues very violently. Between the river Oise and the Soissons our troops have advanced slightly. The enemy has not attempted an attack. Between Soissons and Rheims there has been no important change in the situation.

Second—On the center between Rheims and Verdun the situation also is unchanged. In the Woerthe region the enemy has been able to cross the river Meuse in the vicinity of St. Mihiel but the offensive taken by our troops already, has to a large extent, thrown him back upon the river. To the south of the Woerthe region our attacks have not ceased to progress. The fourteenth German army corps has fallen back having suffered great losses.

Third—Our right wing (in Lorraine and in the Vosges) the effective Germans seem to have been reduced. These detachments of the enemy which had at certain points driven back our advance posts have been repulsed by the entrance into our action of our reserves.

In the Russian zone the Russians have captured Rzeszow, on the railroad leading to Cracow and have also taken two fortified positions to the north and south of Przemyśl. In Poland the Germans appear to have fortified themselves to the north of Kallisz.

BELGIAN "LAND CRUISER" MOWS DOWN GERMAN CAVALRY AND CYCLISTS

LONDON, Sept. 26, 5 a. m.—The correspondent of the Chronicle at Ghent says that the Belgian armored automobile carrying a maxim has again accomplished a notable exploit. He says: "To the north of Alost the armored car came suddenly around a corner and ran into a party of German cavalry and cyclists. The former had dismounted and the latter's gun annihilated most of them before they could remount. Then the car started in pursuit of the cyclists, killing six. As they fled along the road dodging shots and taking shelter behind trees when possible four others were wounded and several captured.

"The commander of the car, Lieut. Delhaix returned to headquarters with helmets, overcoats, saddlery and cycles. He carried a crew of only four picked men. There are, however, always many volunteers for these expeditions. The Germans refer to the car as a land cruiser."

INJURED

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Fire discovered in a livery stable at East 75th street in the heart of one of the most populous districts of the city drew more than half of Manhattan's fire fighting apparatus to the scene today.

The stable, a brick building, was destroyed. Two hundred of the 350 horses housed in the building perished. One man an attendant at the stable was hurt by jumping from the second story.

Tenement houses, thickly populated, adjoined the burning building on each side. The tenements were quickly emptied.

Both were somewhat burned, but not seriously, in trying to extinguish the flames. They escaped in the tender and landed at Stockton.

MAN HELD IN $5000
ON CHARGE OF ARSON

Young Sailor Passed Bogus Check and is Held for Trial—Lester Hill Charged With Violation of Insurance Laws

It is quite a sudden shift to change from police court interpreter to prisoner with a $5000 bond the price of freedom, but such was the move that circumstances forced upon Hipolito Buslewitz in police court this noon.

Buslewitz was acting as interpreter in an assault and battery case when Supt. Welch, accompanied by Chief Inspector of Mines Charles F. Rice and Inspector Edward F. Horrigan of the state police stepped into the courtroom. After looking at the man a moment the officers withdrew, but as soon as the case was concluded the heavy hand of the law was laid upon Buslewitz's shoulder and he was led away. Daniel J. Donahue appeared for the defendant and the case was continued until next Friday. Buslewitz was held in $5000 bail. The charge against him is arson in connection with an East Merrimack street fire.

Violating Insurance Laws
Lester A. Hill, formerly in the insurance business, was before the court this morning on a warrant sworn out by State Officer Keating, under the direction of the state insurance commissioner, charging Hill with a violation of the insurance laws. The case was continued till next Friday.

Passed Bogus Check
M. H. Chandler, a sailor on one of Uncle Sam's battleships, have merrily into this port a few days ago, short of money but well supplied with nerve. He then picked Joseph L. Pepin and began to devise ways and means of "skinning" him.

Mr. Pepin, who is a tailor, stated to the court this morning that the defendant slipped him a bad check and that he gave him three silver dollars in exchange. Also Chandler purported having a suit made and in fact did have it made but he did not produce the necessary long green and therefore the suit was also a dead loss.

Chandler has until Monday night to get back to his shipmates before he is branded as a deserter. His far-fetched has run out but the ten days clause gives him a chance to get back always, provided of course, that he can make an exit from the local "cooler."

This case was put over until Monday morning.

Minor Cases

The longest list of minor offenders which has faced Judge Enright this week were arrayed today. An assault and battery case, in which John Balkous was accused of missing up Antonina Dixon to quite a hearty extent, occupied much of the court's time this morning and finally had to go over until Monday with the defense still to be heard from. J. J. O'Connor appeared for the defense and Daniel J. Donahue for the prosecution.

A young girl, who claimed New York as her home, pleaded guilty to drunkenness for the second time within a short space. Judge Enright advised her to pack up and go back to New York before she was again roped into the police net. Thomas Hayes, a Fall River citizen, was given the same cue.

ENGLISH AERIAL RAID DAMAGES ZEPPELIN
GENEVA, Switzerland, Sept. 26, 4:22 a. m.—A telegram from Basel states that the recent English aerial raid on Dusseldorf, a depot for Zeppelins, resulted in the damage of one Zeppelin but the extent of the injury wrought is not known. A second bomb is reported to have destroyed part of a machinery shed in the vicinity containing duplicate pieces for the aircraft while a third bomb fell in a meadow. No deaths are reported.

As an immediate result of the aerial raid, says the telegram, all cathedral towns along the Rhine, especially at Cologne and Strassburg, are now flying large white flags while the dimensions of the Red Cross flags on the hospitals have been increased.

BIRDMEN FLY AT HEIGHT OF MILE AND A QUARTER

PARIS, Sept. 26, 8:25 a. m.—An aviator who has just returned from the front tells of the difficulty encountered by the flying men on reconnaissance duty. He said:

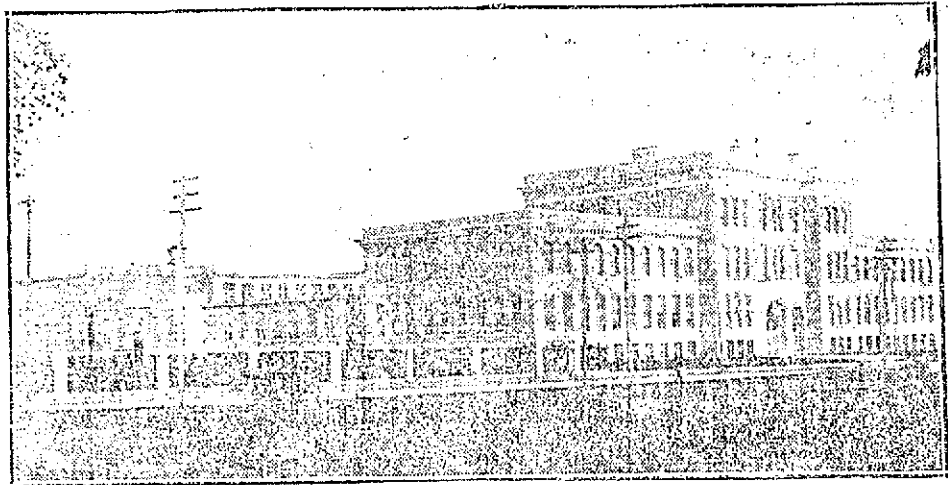

"We are obliged to fly at a height of about one mile and a quarter, which makes observation difficult, as small objects, even with the aid of the strongest glasses assume unfamiliar shapes and become fore-shortened."

"If we fly under that height we are greeted by a hail of rifle fire which is far more effective than the cannon. We fear the rifles more than the bursting shells as the fire of the regiments concentrated on a single object is far more deadly."

BAVARIAN SOLDIERS UNDER ARREST IN BRUSSELS

LONDON, Sept. 26.—The correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph Co. at Ostend is responsible for the statement given out in London today that a number of Bavarian soldiers are under arrest in Brussels charged with facilitating the escape of a large body of French prisoners from the Belgian capital. A court of inquiry is sitting to investigate the matter. The number of Frenchmen who are said to have gotten away are placed at several thousand. The Bavarians are greatly incensed at the charges against them. This story lacks confirmation from other sources.

LOWELL TEXTILE SCHOOL TO PRODUCE GERMAN DYES

THE LOWELL TEXTILE SCHOOL

And Redeem the Textile Business of This Country From Dependence on Foreign Supply — Principal Eames Tells How it Will be Accomplished Here in Lowell—New Buildings are Necessary

The management of the Lowell Textile school has taken up in earnest the problem of manufacturing the textile dye stuffs that have been formerly manufactured in Germany and that have been cut off by the European war. The Lowell Textile school, the best of the kind in the world, is getting its experts to work on the task of producing these dyes for the trade and thus obviate the need of waiting until the Germans are ready to resume business, which may not be for a year or two.

The Textile school has given special attention to the manufacture of dyes for some years past and can now undertake this new problem with great confidence. It has already trained men in the art of producing the celebrated dyes, but will now redouble its efforts in this direction.

One cannot talk long with Principal Charles H. Eames of the Textile school without being impressed with the great significance of the work in which this school is about to devote special attention. In an interview with a representative of The Sun last evening Mr. Eames went over every phase of the subject, avoiding anything like extravagant optimism, but showing clearly in what a thorough and confident spirit the greatest textile school in America is planning to free American industry from needless dependence on foreign nations. Throughout his talk, Principal Eames frequently emphasized the fact that the great war has opened up a vast field to the young American who, with the proper training and temperament, gives a few years to the study of dye manufacture and application. The initiative in the domestic manufacture of dyes must come from the manufacturers, but the Lowell Textile school is setting ready on a large scale so that when it does come American industry will have at hand a trained body of experts, ready for any demand that may be made upon them.

As a very practical illustration of his views, Mr. Eames prefaced his remarks by calling attention to six samples of yarn, three of which had been dyed in Germany and three of which had been dyed at the textile school. Two were a rich crimson, known technically as "fast red" two were brilliant orange and the remaining two were a soft yellow. When the American-dyed yarn and the German-dyed yarn of the same shade were put together, it was impossible to tell where the one ended and the other began.

Principal Eames' Statement

"We are about to devote special attention," said Mr. Eames, "to industrial chemistry as embodied in a three or four year course in the manufacture of dyestuffs for sale but as to use them here, our course will be arranged on a commercial as well as an experimental basis. In the past, we were limited as to time, but by giving a four-year course instead of three to chemistry and dyeing, it will be possible for us to attend to every phase of practical dye-making as well as to the after processes of application. The textile manufacturers are feeling their way carefully, but already new companies are being formed and the birth of new American enterprises daily opens up vast possibilities for young men such as we hope and plan to turn out here."

School Stands Alone

No other school in the country is doing exactly as we are doing; they do make organic compounds, but they do not go as far as we do in practical dye-making. In the line of applied chemistry, no other school pays attention to the application of dyestuffs to textile materials. With the training which a student has here he has two wide fields open to him: the field of dye manufacture and the field of application of dye-stuffs. Needless to say, there will be a great demand in both branches of the textile industry if conditions turn out as generally anticipated.

In order to do the type of work expected in this course, a boy must have a thorough preparation. The management has believed that applicants must have a high school education or its equivalent; it would not be possible to go into the work mapped out, if the students have less preparation. The textile school would not have been able to develop had we not adopted a policy of high requirements years ago. We aimed at raising the standard, and we have succeeded.

In the history of the American textile industry there has not been a more propitious time for a young man to become an expert. This is the time to get into the school. We are in the trough of the sea at present, but we are bound to rise. In two, or three, or four years we will be ready for the crest of the wave and there will be a great demand for the products of our mills. This country has not sought to profit by another's loss, but there is a brighter side; there is a certain philanthropy in being able to meet the wants of other countries, even if in so doing we incidentally advance the cause of American industry and prosperity.

As to our course in dye making: We will first of all devote special attention to what has been already established; we will turn out men ready for any requirement of the business. We will give a great deal more space and time to this phase of our work and it is possible that in the near future we may have to erect new buildings as certain processes in the intended course ought to be done outside the present buildings.

Studied German System

Mr. Eames also went into some details of German dye manufacture as he saw them personally abroad a year or two ago and was strong in praise of the German system which has given them such a hold on the dyeing and chemical end of the textile industry. In speaking of the practical details of the work abroad he said that the staff of instructors will remain the same, with one addition, Mr. Andrew Younger will be an instructor in the weaving department. He graduated from the school in two courses, that of design and woven weaving and finishing, and has for some time past been an employee of the American Woolen company.

Following is a list of dyes made and used practically in the textile school, some of which have been made for years and all of which have been thoroughly tested before being used in the yarns and fabrics.

Fluorescein, eosin, safranin, alizarin, malachite green, methyl violet, fast red A, orange II, methylene blue, fast green, various lake colors and many intermediate products.

MATTY BALDWIN

To Meet "Harlem Tommy" Murphy in Boston Ring Tuesday

Matty Baldwin of Charlestown, the lightweight champion of N. E. and "Harlem Tommy" Murphy of New York, is the attraction that will draw thousands of boxing followers to the Atlas A. A. next Tuesday night. The boxers have been signed up to box 12 rounds at 133 lbs., weigh at 3 p. m.

It would be a difficult matter to match any two boxers in any class who can satisfy the spectators better than this same team. They have met a number of times and the question of superiority is still in doubt, but it should be settled for good next Tuesday night, as they box for a decision.

Baldwin and Murphy have been boxing for nearly fifteen years. They are both married, Baldwin being the father of three children, while Tommy is the father of two. They are direct opposites in boxing as well as in other ways. Murphy is fast and clever, while the Bunker Hill boy depends on his raised style of milling to win his battles, although he can box cleverly when the occasion arises and is considered the best ring general in the country. Baldwin has a decision over Willie Ritchie, and Tommy lost a close verdict to the champion in a 20 round match last year. Murphy and Baldwin are boxing in their best form at the present time. Murphy showed he has lost none of his cunning and speed last Tuesday by defeating Frankie Callahan the rugged Brooklyn, N. Y. lightweight. Baldwin has defended his title successfully the past year against all contenders.

The preliminary bill for this show is the best ever staged in Boston. Lew Roth, a noted waterweight from N. Y., meets Dave Powers of Malden in the opening 6 round bout.

"Kid" Charles of Manchester, N. H., faces Tommy Dorsey of Cambridge in the other 6 round affair, and a rugged mill is expected when they clash.

The 8 round semi-final will be between Larry Burns, the hard hitting Lawrence boy and Tommy Rowan, a willing New York boy who comes here with a good reputation won in hard battles in the metropolitan.

AYER CO. NOT TO CLOSE

When asked as to whether the rumor that the Ayer company would soon close for a short time, Dr. Lowell today emphatically denied that the plant would close. The business of the company, he said, has been hard hit by the war; but the foreign business from neutral countries will be sufficient to keep the works busy. Some changes have been made in the employees, but there is no intention of shutting down. There will be as usual, a period of slackness in October.

FILTRATION CONTRACT APPROVED BY UNIONS

Men Will Work But Eight Hours Per Day—Law Forbids Exclusion of Non-Union Men—P. J. Reynolds Chosen Registrar of Labor Under the Civil Service Arrangement

At an adjourned meeting of the municipal council yesterday, the contract between the water department and the Charles R. Gow Co. of Boston for the construction of the new filtration plant involving the sum of $1,000,000 was approved and Patrick J. Reynolds was elected registrar of labor.

The meeting was scheduled to be held in the forenoon, but on account of a conference being held between representatives of labor organization, the members of the council and Mr. Gow of the Charles R. Gow Co. the meeting was postponed to 1:30 o'clock this afternoon. However, it was 2:45 o'clock before Mayor D. J. Murphy called to order.

At the opening of the meeting Commissioner Carmichael moved that the council approve a contract with the Charles R. Gow Co. of Boston for the construction of the new filtration plant. The commissioner said the bid of this firm was between $1,000,000 and $2,000,000 less than the lowest competitor. He referred to the labor question and said it is impossible to stipulate in the contract that the work be done by union men, because such a move would be illegal. He informed the council the men employed by the Gow Co. for the construction plant will not be requested to work more than eight hours a day. Mr. Carmichael said a conference was held this forenoon with labor representatives and Mr. Gow and a satisfactory agreement was reached by all interested, and that the labor representatives were given assurance the work would be done by Lowell men. He said everything possible in accordance with the law is stipulated in the contract.

City Solicitor Hennessey said there had been erroneous ideas that certain restrictions could be inserted into the contract. He said there was a similar case in this city some time ago when labor organizations petitioned the council asking that all municipal printing be done by union labor, but this, he said, is illegal. He concluded by saying the Gow Co. had furnished bonds to the amount of $15,000 for the performance of the work in a satisfactory manner, and it would be illegal to give the contract to any other company for the fact that the Gow Co. was the lowest bidder.

Mr. Brown said Mr. Gow stated this morning he would pay his laborers $2.25 a day, which, he said, was more than union wages. The motion was put to a vote and was unanimously carried. A vote was and was unanimously carried. A vote was and was unanimously carried.

REPUBLICAN PLATFORM

State Convention at Concord Declares for the Establishment of American Merchant Marine

CONCORD, N. H., Sept. 25.—The republican state convention in session here this noon adopted a platform declaring for "heartily approval and co-operation with honest men engaged in business pursuits on the part of the national government; for the re-establishment of the protective principle tariff legislation and the appointment of an expert tariff commission; and for the establishment of an American merchant marine." The record of the democratic state administration was assailed, credit for progressive legislation claimed for the republicans of New Hampshire and a pledge given to improve and strengthen all advanced legislation which republicans have written into our laws. Proposed amendments were endorsed to the direct primary, employers' liability, fish and game and highway laws and a declaration made in favor of a budget system for public expenditures.

Upon the railroad question the platform said: "While the present financial condition of the New Hampshire railroads requires that careful consideration be given to their application for relief, we are not in favor of an increase of existing mileage rates without further investigation and an adjustment of the 'road rates.' An attempt to strike out the last clause of this plank was defeated on a viva voce vote. The closing plank of the platform was an appeal for the union within the republican party of all opposed to 'democratic misrule' in state and nation.

The convention was presided over by George H. Moses of Concord recently minister of the United States to Greece and Montenegro and was addressed by former Governor Curtis Guild of Massachusetts and by the leading candidates nominated at the recent republican primary, Rolland H. Spaulding of Rochester for governor, Jacob H. Gallinger of Concord for United States senator, Cyrus A. Sullivan of Manchester and Edward H. Wilson of Nashua for congress.

Its closing business was the election of a new state committee.

MAY BE A CANDIDATE

PRESIDENT MIGHT ACCEPT A RE-NOMINATION IF IT IS OFFERED TO HIM

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—The following is a copy of Secretary Tamm's letter to Edward Grosvenor, treasurer of New Jersey, written at the direction of the president, in which the latter declines endorsement for a second term by New Jersey democrats.

"You were generous enough to consult me as to whether the democrats of New Jersey should at this time endorse the president for a second term. I had a talk with the president about it and he deeply appreciates the generosity of the suggestion; but New Jersey is his home state, the men who would act in this matter are his own personal friends and he feels no slight as if he were taking advantage of the extraordinary situation now existing to gain some personal advantage through such an expression of confidence by them.

"This would be inconsistent with his whole thought and spirit and he shrinks from it as from something that would embarrass him rather than help him."

It was understood the president decided not to allow the New Jersey democrats to endorse him for a second term because he believed it would look as though he were seeking re-nomination. His attitude, however, was not taken by friends here to mean that he has decided not to accept a re-nomination if it is offered to him.

MRS. A. ABBOTT HURT

THROWN FROM AUTO ON BRIDGE STREET WHEN HER AUTO SKIDDED

While proceeding along Bridge street yesterday afternoon, a Ford car, owned and driven by Mr. Andrew Abbott of Methuen, skidded and crashed into a Bay State railway post, throwing one of the occupants, Mrs. Abbott, against the post. She sustained a laceration of the scalp which necessitated her being removed to St. John's hospital.

It seems that Mr. and Mrs. Abbott were returning from a trip to the mountains. As the machine was being driven along Bridge street, near French street, it skidded and the driver could place it under control, the auto had turned around, the side striking against the iron post. Mrs. Abbott was sitting in the rear seat, nearer the post, and she was thrown violently out of the car. The other occupants fortunately escaped injury.

One side of the machine was damaged, a mud guard being badly bent.

OFFER IS RECOMMENDED

BOSTON, Sept. 25.—Confirmation of the offer of 32 1/2 per cent. which Thomas F. Kelley, insurance manufacturer of Lynn, made to creditors, was recommended by Referee William F. Perry, in a report filed in federal court today. The referee previously had reported against confirmation of the offer on the ground that Mr. Kelley had obtained money and credit from the New England Trust Co. by means of a false statement as to his financial condition.

Mr. Kelley contended that the statement was true and investigation made at his request substantiated his statement. Referee Perry in reporting that the bankrupt's offer should be confirmed, said he still "was of the opinion that the bankrupt treated the New England Trust Co. unfairly."

In support of his offer, Mr. Kelley has deposited $232,012 with the court, which will be distributed among his creditors as soon as Judge Norton confirms the offer.

STROYMAN IS HELD

BOUND OVER FOR SUPERIOR COURT AT LYNN—WANTED IN BOSTON

David Stroyman, the man who was arrested Thursday at Bar's shoe shop on a warrant charging him with larceny in Lynn, was arraigned in the Lynn court this morning and held for the grand jury.

The Lynn chief of police called up Supt. Welch by telephone, this afternoon and informed him that the Boston police, as well as the New York authorities, want Stroyman as soon as he is through serving the sentence which is probably awaiting him at the hands of the Lynn court. The charge against Stroyman in Boston is uttering and forging worthless checks. An indictment has already been secured against him in New York on a similar charge.

BOSTON, Sept. 25.—Announcement today of the result of a recount yesterday of a vote cast for members of the legislative committee of the state branch, American Federation of Labor, showed a tie between two candidates for the third place on the committee. Kneeland of Boston had an apparent majority of one vote, and showed a tie between two candidates for the third place on the committee. A subsequent recount showed that both men were tied at 11 votes. Kneeland then arose and moved that Mead be declared elected and this motion was carried.

YOUNG LOWELL SAILOR HONORED

James L. Tully Tendered Farewell Reception at His Home

Had Served in Mexico and Reenlists for Further Service in Navy

Mr. James L. Tully, a former member of Uncle Sam's fighting forces aboard the U. S. S. Michigan, who saw service in the Mexican outbreak will leave Monday to enter on his second enlistment in the navy. As a result a large party of friends called at his home in chestnut street Thursday and tendered the young man a farewell reception and as a token of their high esteem presented him a beautiful signet ring.

The presentation speech was made by Mr. Michael Sullivan who in warm terms told of the many good qualities possessed by the young man.

Mr. Tully, although taken much by surprise, responded gracefully and thanked his friends saying that their gift was highly appreciated and would always be remembered. He was then asked to relate some of the incidents that occurred during his stay in Mexico, which he did in a very pleasing manner.

He said that his eight months' stay in Mexico, for the Michigan, on which he was placed, was a most interesting Mexican waters long before the war broke out, would always recall many pleasant memories. Just after the war broke out, he said, everything was full of excitement. Every man aboard imbibed that fighting spirit characteristic of full blooded Americans and wanted to go in immediately to tear the "greasers" as he called them, to pieces. At night the bugle calls, which in the regular routine day did not seem of much importance, were fully realized, and helped instill the fighting spirit in the men and kept them on edge all the time. Although he did not take part in any active fighting he did a lot of shore duty and made a thorough study of the Mexican people and their customs.

"This country will have to keep a close watch on Mexico for a long time," he said, "should you desire to see the step in and take charge as it did in millinery attractions, and this year like her former triumphs will certainly please most anybody who likes the most fashionable and becoming hats. She has never failed to please at these opening displays, and she cordially invites the public to attend and inspect the latest effects in this season's creations both from home and abroad.

Cuba and the Philippines. To conquer Mexico would be a hard job. The country is overrun with thieves and they would have a decided advantage if it came to war. The country is unsuited to any but guerrilla warfare. I saw General Villa once, and believe me, I will always remember that face. It was enough to scare anyone away. The masses do not know anything and they can be easily excited to revolt by their leaders such as Carranza and Villa, who are much better schooled.

Snatching of Vera Cruz, he told his audience that it was one of the most beautiful cities he had ever seen. He was loudly applauded at the close of his remarks.

The following young people followed Mr. Tully with songs and recitations: Michael Sullivan, Wallace Morris, John Shields, Martin Brick, Dr. Owen Conway, John Granfield, Paul Chappell, Raymond Fox, James Tully, Eleanor Buckley, Lena Vorn, Alice Caisse, Mary O'Leary, Nora McNamara, and Mary Conley.

Refreshments were served by the following young ladies: Mary O'Leary, Bessie Tully and Nora Moloney.

Mr. Charles Thomas and Mr. Alonzo Wynna had charge of the affair and to their untiring efforts can be attributed the success and enjoyment of the occasion.

MATHEWS MAKE PLANS

FOR SERIES OF SMOKE TALKS WITH PROMINENT SPEAKERS—TO BE HELD IN DECEMBER

A special meeting of the Mathew Temperance Institute will be held this evening and President Walter T. Powers expect a large attendance. Action will be taken on the report of a committee recently appointed to consider holding an event early in December.

Next week a proposed amendment to the constitution, providing for a return to the old custom of having the regular meetings of the society on Tuesday evenings, will come up for consideration.

John E. O'Neil has been elected chairman of the board of trustees and Edward F. Draper, secretary. Frank O. Lincoln, treasurer, will submit his first quarterly report at the next meeting. Rev. Dr. Tracey of Brighton, the new president of the Boston C. T. A. U., has appointed William H.

Duffy of the St. Mary's C. T. A. U., of Lynn as deputy to the local society.

Many members are discussing the possibility of having a joint outing with the Lynn society, similar to that held six years ago. Mr. Duffy is well known in this city and will make an official visit in Lowell soon.

The archdiocese C. T. A. U. will hold a banquet on Oct. 3 in Boston to commemorate the 124th anniversary of Fr. Mathew's birth. All the C. T. A. societies will be represented and a large delegation from the Matthews will attend. William H. Carey of this city is on the committee in charge of this affair. Rev. Fr. O'Connor of Boston, chairman of the committee, states that the president of the C. T. A. U. of America, Rev. Fr. O'Callaghan of Chicago, will attend.

The first smoke talk of a series arranged by the literary committee will be held on Oct. 6. Louis K. Rankin, commissioner of public works for the city of Boston, a former engineer at Panama, will deliver an address on the canal. His five years' work on the Isthmus won him praise from the government officials at the time of his retirement to accept a position in his native city.

Rev. Denis A. O'Brien, D. D., of Cambridge, a former officer of the society, will also address the members at this gathering and his talk will be on the life of Fr. Mathew. Each member will be privileged to invite a friend and a large attendance is expected on that evening.

for the sake of being with her. Finally he becomes a drunkard, a physical wreck and his mind gives way under the strain. In the midst of all this misery, "the vampire" visits him, demanding a kiss as he topples over dead and laughs joyfully when she kneels over the dead body and is sure she has another victim.

Sam A. McHarry will play the husband, Miss Mary Mason "the vampire" will be played by Miss Sadie Galloupe. Win. J. Freeman has been allotted the role of the husband's trust and best friend and it is upon the shoulders of the above members of the company that the brunt of the telling of the story lies. That they will give an artistic, creditable performance goes without saying. To be sure the other members will be seen in minor roles but they are nevertheless important in the whole. An unusually fine production has been arranged and "A Fool There Was" should cause more than passing interest among theatre goers the coming week.

THIS OWL THEATRE

An announcement of great interest is that the five-act production of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" is booked for Tuesday and Tuesday at the Owl. This feature is acted by a famous cast and won't they are nevertheless important in the whole. An unusually fine production has been arranged and "A Fool There Was" should cause more than passing interest among theatre goers the coming week.

THE ROYAL THEATRE

The Royal theatre has booked another big feature from the General Film Company. This time it is the marvelous tale of adventure in five reels entitled "From Fire to Fortune," or "The Sunken Village," a play that has caused much of favorable comment from the critics. A splendidly recruited from the Lubin forces is seen to advantage in this production. Not that the prices remain the same during these next two days. Although the cost of this booking is exceedingly high, the management believes in giving the public the benefit of an extra day's performance daily. Today and tomorrow's program will also contain a great two-part Kleino-Cello feature "When the Beacon Failed," a romance of the sea, which has been produced in the best manner imaginable. The excellence of these Cello features are well known to the general public. Many others will complete the program.

TOWN OF CHELMSFORD

Meeting of Water District to be Held Next Wednesday—Large Attendance Expected

A special meeting of the water district of the town of Chelmsford will be held Wednesday evening next and it is expected the affair will be largely attended. One of the most important matters to be brought to the attention of the district will be the question of paying $4,336.92 to the town of Bruno, who did the recent piping work in the district, and who claims he sustained a loss of over $4,000 on the job.

It is understood that Mr. Bruno has asked the water commissioners to reimburse him that amount, but they refused and at his request the matter was inserted in article 7, of the warrant, which reads as follows:

To see if the district will vote to reimburse Thomas Bruno for the financial loss (estimated by him to be $4,336.92) actually sustained by him in the performance of his contract for laying of water pipes as per his agreement entered into with the commissioners of the district under date of August 19, 1913, and act in relation to the same.

It is expected that Mr. Bruno will be present at the meeting and will explain to the voters how he sustained his alleged loss.

Money goes on interest Saturday, October 3rd at The Lowell Five Cent Savings Bank.

SLEEPING OUT OF DOORS

In this age of fads and cults, so many persons, especially young women, enjoy the healthful recuperating powers of slumber, but to flirt with the north winds, and the treachery of the rain storms on an open piazza, is not only dangerous but absurd. Fresh air is all right in its place, but no human being was ever built to endure the strain of sleeping in the open exposed to snow storms, rain, winter cold and sultry dampness. Of course it has been done, and is being done every day, but the result will be disastrous. So severe are the storms and cold in this country, that even a beast would soon perish after many nights of exposure. To sleep with the windows open, and the covers well tucked in around the body, is the only right way to enjoy the healthful recuperating powers of slumber, but to flirt with the north winds, and the treachery of the rain storms on an open piazza, is not only dangerous but absurd. In less than a year the whole face looks aged and drawn like a dried autumn leaf. For an example of this study pictures of the Indians and you will find that their faces are a network of tiny wrinkles, caused from their out of door life, day and night. An old mountaineer's face, which has borne the storms for many years resembles a dried apple. Then why should mildew of peaches and cream complexion risk such a fate.

AIKEN STREET SEWER

The extension of the Aiken street sewer is but a very slight feat of engineering compared with some things which the city has done, is now doing, or is about to do, but nevertheless in effect it is a far-reaching innovation and one that will have no slight part in improving the sanitary conditions of the community. Its completion must bring a feeling of reassurance to the populous section in the vicinity, for though the work in itself is comparatively slight, its continued neglect might easily have led to very serious results.

So far as the sewer outlets on the Merrimack river are concerned Lowell need not fear outside investigation. On more than one occasion the state authorities have commented on the fact that this city has shown greater zeal and judgment than any other community along the Merrimack valley in this most important particular. Owing to the great difference in water altitudes at different seasons, some of the sewer outlets—even those built out into the river—were above the water level in the summer, with the result that they were plainly obnoxious at times and always a fruitful source of danger. To follow the progress made of late years in sewage disposal would be to read of community infection in every form of contagious disease. It is the part of prudence for the city to anticipate the slightest wish of the state board of health in anything connected with sewage at all times, thus ensuring to the city immunity from almost certain disease infection.

It is no secret that the Concord river within the city limits affords the strongest possible contrast to the Merrimack river in all that relates to sewers and drainage. Not only the city sewers along the Merrimack but the mills and manufacturing plants have been attended to so that possible pollution is reduced to a minimum. Along the Concord many manufacturing plants turn all manner of noxious refuse into the filthy stream, and it is used as an open sewer also by many of the more undesirable tenement blocks and ramshackle residences along its banks. Sometimes the odor from the river bed is almost unbearable as those know who are compelled to use the Andover street bridge, and it is surprising that the region through which the much abused river flows does not suffer more from certain diseases.

About a year ago a bill was introduced into the legislature by a local representative for the purpose of having the Concord dredged, and though it did not meet with legislative favor it brought the necessity for this improvement strongly home to the people of Lowell. There is such an accumulation of all manner of stationary refuse in the channel that no mere sewer improvement or regulations concerning the waste from the manufacturing plants would be adequate to ensure cleanliness, but civic sanitation would be served by such restrictions following a thorough dredging and purifying of the river bed.

This cannot be done without the expenditure of some money, but there is an economy that is more easily than extravagance. If, after one, two or five years an epidemic broke out in the region of Lawrence and Church streets or in lower Belvidere, the ultimate cost might easily surpass the amount needed to make the Concord sanitary. It is a beautiful river and public sanitation and decency demand that it be made a clean river. Now that we have done so well with regard to the Merrimack within the city limits, why not go seriously to work to improve the Concord? The same incentive holds good and the suggested project is by no means of secondary importance.

THE COTTON CRISIS

Though at first glance it may seem contradictory, the war which is expected to usher in such a great boom eventually for the textile business—especially the cotton manufacturing end of it—has created a serious situation for the cotton producer. As a result we have a well defined cotton crisis, to overcome which many wise individuals from the head of the government to the inconspicuous individual in our industrial communities are exerting themselves. The strongest manifestation of this general desire to help is shown in the "buy-a-hale-of-cotton" movement which has been started by far-seeing business men with the official and unofficial approval of President Wilson and the other administration heads.

The situation is this: All of the European countries engaged in the gigantic war have been hitherto our customers, buying more of the raw cotton grown in America than was used by our own mills. This year there has been an unusually good crop and the cotton growers and selling agents would have reaped a great harvest were it not for the struggle abroad which has temporarily destroyed the foreign market and left our cotton growers with a large supply on their hands. Most of this they cannot get rid of, unless they are willing to cut down their prices to such a low figure that all profits will be eliminated.

The war had scarcely started when Texas felt the pinch; her great crop was without a market; now all the cotton growing states are in dire distress. No adequate provisions have been made for storing on a large scale and though everything possible is being done by the states, the planters and the federal government, the entire cotton industry is threatened with bankruptcy. As is to be expected, speculators are already banking on the necessity of the south and there is the possibility that the cotton may be almost given away.

The "buy-a-hale-of-cotton" movement has been started to offset this danger and to keep the cotton growers from ruin. Those who agitate it suggest that thousands of individuals in all parts of the country buy at least one bale of cotton at the normal figure, thus partially making up for the shortage in the foreign market and preventing the ruin that may or may not be inevitable. Cotton of a good variety sells now at 10 cents the pound or $50 per ton, and it is certain that if the present emergency can be tide over, the price will rise proportionately.

tinna to the coming demand. Those who respond to the call of the south and show their practical sympathy by buying a bale of cotton may feel assured that money so spent will be well invested and will return with interest next season.

The very fact that France, Germany, Belgium and to a lesser extent England have bought no cotton from us this year is the strongest indication of the stagnation in foreign manufacture that will follow the war. The various countries will be impoverished; they will have lost their best workers; they will be confronted with all manner of internal demands and will lack industrial initiative. From all over the world will come strong demands for the products of the cotton looms and America will get the lion's share of the resultant business. Consequently there will be a greater demand in our own country for raw cotton, and there will be a renewed demand in other countries that the paralyzed industries may be revived. If the American planter can only be aided to surmount this time of adversity, it would seem that prosperity to an unprecedented degree looms ahead. In this prosperity those who have bought a bale or bales of cotton may take a pardonable pride as well as a practical share—to some slight extent. The new cotton movement should appeal to the patriotism as well as to the business instinct of prudent Americans.

OBSTACLES TO PEACE

So long as militarism is the dominant European policy so long will peace be deferred, and in this respect it is difficult to say which nation is the worst offender. At least, no nation has a monopoly on the militarist policy. Since the war began, apologists for England and France declare that Germany must be crushed in order that militarism may be put down and Germany applies the same argument regarding its enemies. Thus public opinion in all these countries agrees that the death of militarism will usher in the dawn of peace, but when it comes to a practical application of the remedy, all nations are found to offend to a more or less degree.

It is a mistake to suppose that the present war will, per se, stop the militarist propaganda which endangers the peace of Europe permanently. In the published declaration of Germany's official attitude some days ago it was plainly hinted that should the allies fight on to the finish and crush German aspirations, Germany will straightway begin to train its people with the intention of returning the blow at the first possible opportunity. Peace lovers see little in this outlook on which to base their hope of a better and brighter time.

The death of militarism will come not from any action taken by governments but from the birth of a better spirit in the masses. Today, the militarist is easily inflamed and king, Kaiser and czar may plot and counterplot at will, knowing that they can knead their subjects as the baker kneads dough. Some time when all people realize what the people of young America realized viz: that all real power is vested in the people, the numerous militarist policy will disappear and a more enlightened world can plan for some practical method of ensuring universal peace.

LABOR BOARD

Mr. John Golden may have an excellent reason for resigning from the state board of labor and industries, but the rather meagre explanation given for his action does not seem to fully justify it. In all boards of the kind there must be a wide difference of opinion and it is only by different viewpoints as impersonated by individuals that public questions may be solved in any except a one-sided way. It is inevitable that Mr. Golden should be thrown with men just as earnest as himself and with as great a zeal to serve the public, though possibly seeing things in an altogether different light. His suggestion that all matters affecting state labor problems should be acted on by a board of one, and that one bearing the union card, testifies to his confidence in his cause but does not commend his judgment. The ideal labor board from the public point of view is not the labor board which Mr. Golden would like to see in operation.

PANAMA-PACIFIC EXPOSITION

In a statement given to the press a day or so ago Secretary Bryan announced that the European war will not compel the postponement of the Panama-Pacific exposition or result in the withdrawal of any of the nations which had signified their intention of participating. The government has been officially notified by 27 foreign governments of their intention to take part, and even private business concerns in England and Germany will contribute, according to their original plans. The statement of the secretary is most optimistic, but still there is such a close connection between war and business that some collapse of the great exposition seems inevitable.

As an American institution and as it affects domestic matters, the exposition will be uninjured by European conditions. Forty-six states have signified their intention of participating and most elaborate plans are being perfected to make the affair worthy of the event it commemorates. South America, too, is alive to the possibility of the great bazaar, according to Secretary Bryan, who, among other facts, says that one of the South American governments has increased the amount of its subscription for the exposition since the war began and that all of them are regarding it as an opportunity to extend their commerce. In this respect our own government is not liable to be found wanting.

FOR DEMOCRATIC VICTORY

So far as New England has been able to judge, the political trend of this part of the country will vindicate the national administration, for national politics has been made the local issue wherever there has been any contest—with resultant victory for President Wilson and his supporters. From now until election time many men of many minds will agitate political questions of more or less local importance but behind all is the fact that a democratic victory will be accepted as a vote of confidence in the national administration which deserves it richly. The democratic party has achieved great things while in power and it is about to achieve many other things which must eventually react favorably on general conditions in this country. Maine has shown the way the wind is blowing and it behooves Massachusetts Democrats to work with a will no that a democratic victory may spur on the administration to greater effort.

A. Ruston Bey may find some consolation in the fact that he has the last word, but on his trip back to Turkey must come the realization that what he gained in debate, he lost in diplomacy. The successful diplomat, whether in the light of his own nationality or that he has offended, is the one that listens much and says little—or nothing.

THE BRITISH SUBMARINES

Blockade the Elbe—Entrance to Kiel Canal is Under Watch of Torpedo Craft

LONDON, Sept. 26.—When Winston Spencer Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, summarized for an Italian correspondent, as published yesterday, the practical results of England's command of the sea, he let slip the first definite information on the pressure that the British fleet is exerting along the coast of Germany.

"Our submarines are blockading the very throat of the Elbe," was all he would say of the actual operations. But the public takes this as indicating that the grand fleet has by no means lain inactive, though its duties, almost as much as Admiral Sir John Jellicoe's plans of campaign, are kept under cover with remarkable success.

Instead of contenting himself with a general blockading position, on the high sea, the British commander has his scouts at the very entrance to the Kiel canal itself.

English Inside German Lines

The only regular engagement by portions of the fleet, when five German warships were sunk, occurred near the mouth of the Elbe river estuary, some 15 to 20 miles wide, is about 70 miles distant from Heligoland. Cuxhaven, an important port on the North sea at the southern limit of the Elbe mouth, lies 65 miles from Heligoland.

Great Ports Far Inland

Brunsbüttel, on the north shore of the Elbe and close to the canal, is 90 miles east-southeast of Heligoland. Hamburg, on the Elbe, is 85 miles by air from Brunsbüttel and fully 100 miles by the channel. Bremen, the other great port of Germany, likewise enjoys the protection of long river courses against sea attack, being 55 miles south-southeast of Brunsbüttel, on the Weser. This river empties into the North sea some 35 miles southeast of the Elbe.

Since attacks on these ports by sea are almost out of the question, submarine blockaders at the river mouth, however, not only can bottle them up, but are in position to intercept actual warships using the Kiel canal entrance.

Meanwhile the grand fleet sails to number 200 warships, is steaming up and down the coast, as Lord St. Vincent, in fair weather and foul, kept the sea in front of Bonaparte and prevented Napoleon's fleet and 200,000 veteran troops from invading England.

SITUATION IN MEXICO REPORTED VERY GRAVE

Villa and Carranza Still at Swords Points — Carranza Says Villa Demanded Impossible Changes in Call Issued for Conference of the Constitutional Chiefs

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 26.—General Carranza, the acting head of the Mexican government, in discussing the statement which he gave out last night reviewing the difficulties between himself and General Francisco Villa, states that the situation is grave but that the constitutionalists are ready for any emergency. General Villa, he declares, demanded impossible changes in the call issued for a conference of constitutionalist chiefs on October 1.

Villa's demands, he said, were that the general conference pledge itself to reestablish the national and state civil regimes within 30 days after the conference concluded its discussions, that present army officers shall be eligible as candidates for any elective office; that the federal state legislature be convoked immediately and that the electoral college be chosen for the election of a permanent president.

AMERICAN TROOPS WILL NOT BE WITHDRAWN UNTIL TROUBLE IS OVER

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—Villa is said to have 5000 men on the way to Sonora and it is believed this force will outnumber the followers of Carranza, that the latter will avoid a fight, thus ensuring temporary peace at least. The hope of officials today that actual warfare would be avoided was further strengthened by the fact that Carranza has said he will not attack Villa.

Meantime there seems to be little prospect of the American troops being withdrawn from Vera Cruz until the troubles between the two generals are adjusted.

Although negotiations with Carranza have come to the point of asking him to name some one to whom the custom house may be turned over, the fact that Carranza is expected to cause delay in reaching a satisfactory understanding with Carranza is a consideration. Carranza is said to be objecting to this government constituting the Carranza authority as the central government in Mexico, and it is believed the large amount collected by American officers in the way of customs will not be turned over to any faction in Mexico but will be held until there is a firmly established government.

As President Wilson is maintaining a position of neutrality as between the two factions, he is endeavoring to impress on consular agents the importance of refraining from involving the United States on the side of either Carranza or Villa. Whatever the consuls do will be in the line of aiding the two chiefs or their representatives to come to some understanding.

The girl, who is about 26, was cut and bruised and for nearly an hour was unconscious. She was removed to the St. Joseph's hospital, in Providence, where her condition is reported serious.

Hamilton received a broken collarbone, severe cuts on the face and bruises on the side and legs. After being attended by a physician he was removed to his home in Pawtucket. The automobile was badly wrecked.

The convention delegates inspected the upper Hudson and the barge canal in Troy and vicinity today and expected to return to New York tonight.

JEALOUS FRENZY

Hosea Ball Shot Mrs. Wood and Cut His Own Throat

LYNDONVILLE, Vt., Sept. 26.—Hosea Ball, 30 years old, a teamster of the town, probably fatally shot Mrs. Myrtle Wood of St. Johnsbury early last night and then attempted to commit suicide by gashing his throat with a jackknife. The woman is not expected to live, but Ball, who was found near the scene of the shooting by railroad employees, was treated by a local physician and later taken to St. Johnsbury by Sheriff W. H. Worthen.

Mrs. Wood, only child of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Duval of Folsom, Crossing, about a mile above the village, and Ball, who has lived with his mother at Lyndonville, have known each other since childhood, but it was never known that they were more than acquaintances. Two years ago the victim of the shooting, who is 25 years old, married Percy Wood of St. Johnsbury. They have no children.

Mrs. Wood has been staying with her parents here and about 7:30 last night went to the home of John Flower, about half a mile distant, to get some milk. She had covered about an eighth of a mile, through a back road, on her return journey when she was accosted by Ball, who had evidently been drinking heavily.

Ball stopped the young woman and said: "Well, Myrtle, you're married now, aren't you?"

"Yes," she replied.

Ball is said to have pulled a revolver from his pocket and exclaiming: "Well, — you, I'll fix you," shot her twice, one bullet entering the stomach and the other lodging below the heart.

Mrs. Wood, weak from shock and loss of blood, ran back to the Flower house and pushing open the kitchen door, fell upon the floor. In the meantime, Ball took a jackknife from his pocket and inflicted two ugly gashes in his throat. His cries, however, were heard by employees of the Boston & Maine railroad at the roundhouse, and Mr. Flower summoned Dr. A. A. Cheney of Lyndonville and Dr. John M. Allen of St. Johnsbury to attend Mrs. Wood. Sheriff Worthen, who had been notified, arrested Ball, and after his injuries were treated handcuffed him and took him to the jail in St. Johnsbury. It was stated at midnight that Ball would probably recover.

J. H. H. MACKAY DEAD

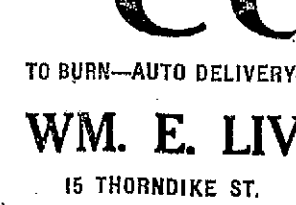

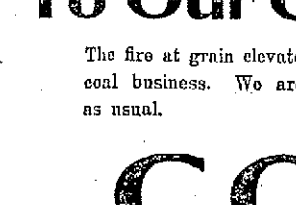

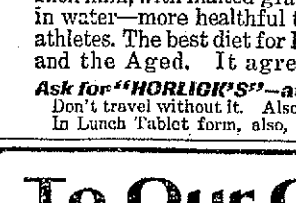

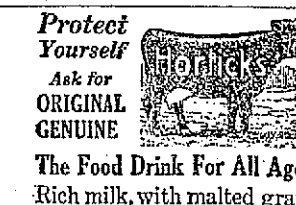

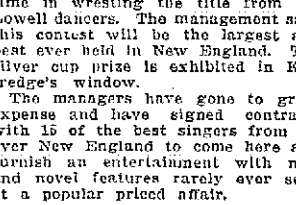

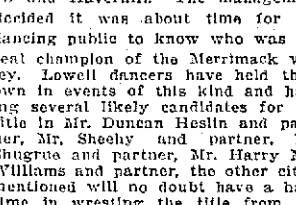

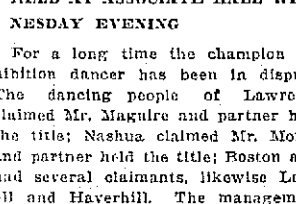

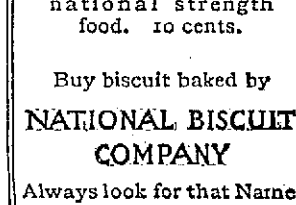

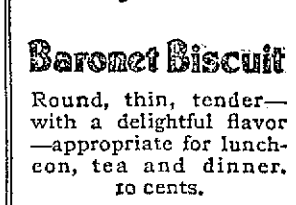

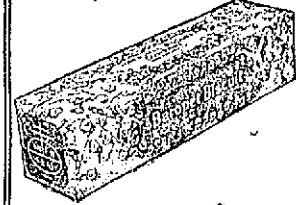

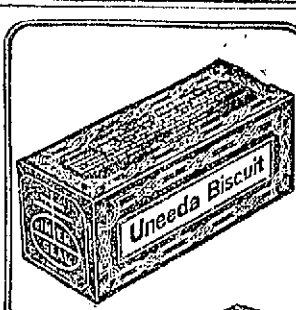

GREENFIELD RESIDENT FORMERLY PROMINENT IN MASONRY IN LONDON

GREENFIELD, Sept. 26.—James Henry Hudson Mackay, aged 61, died suddenly Thursday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Snyder at 32 Crescent street. Mackay was a native of Wick Gaithers, Scot, coming to this country two years ago from London, where he was a borough surveyor. He had been employed here as a bookkeeper for W. E. Benson. His daughter, Miss Maudie Mackay, came here six weeks ago from London to visit her father and Thursday evening, they were calling. On their return Mr. Mackay was taken suddenly ill and died a few minutes later.

In London Mr. Mackay was prominent in masonry, having been past master of two lodges. He had a life members' medal for long service in territorial work.

Mr. Mackay was a member of the vestal choir of St. James' Episcopal church of Greenfield.

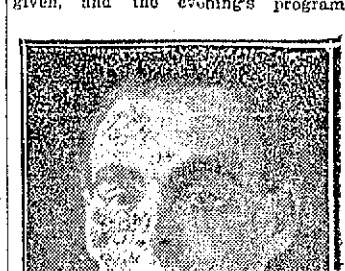

In addition to Miss Maudie Mackay he leaves two other children, Miss Dorothy J. Mackay and James Frederick Mackay, both of London.

WARREN CLUB PARTY

HELD ITS THIRD ANNUAL SOCIABLE AT ASSOCIATE HALL LAST EVENING

The Warren club, composed of several young men prominent in the social affairs of the city, conducted another successful event last evening in Associate hall, the occasion being the third annual autumn party. There was a very large attendance, 400 young couples being the estimate given, and the evening's program proved very enjoyable and reflects much credit on the hospitality of the committee in charge.

Dancing was begun at 8 o'clock to the pleasing strains of Broderick's concert orchestra, and from that time on the young people danced up until 12 o'clock, when that old saying "the longest way round is the sweetest way home," repeated itself over and over again to nearly everyone present.

About 9 o'clock, Mr. Joseph Sheehy and partner, Miss Florence Hildreth, gave a most delightful exhibition of the modern dance steps. The one-step, maxis and hostess were all ably portrayed by this clever young couple who have tripped themselves into the hearts of people all over New England in the comparatively short time they have been dancing. They were given a great hand on leaving the floor.

The following officers and committees were responsible for the success of the event:

General manager, John H. Farrell; assistant general manager, Fred Smith; floor director, Hugh Flinnery; assistant floor director, John Joyce; treasurer, Edward Harrington; assistant treasurer, John Baxter; chief aid, Frank Flinnery; aids, everybody.

Reception committee: Chairman, Fred Webster; John Walsh, Franklin Williams, Edmund Preston, Frank O'Brien, Walter Cleary, William McCarthy, Thomas Dowd, Harry Snyder, Louis Tallen and Thomas Conley.

AMONG THE TOILERS

Miss Emma Laddams, of the Shaw factory has returned from a two weeks' visit to friends in Ayer, Mass.

Joseph Connor, of the Mass. mills has returned from a visit to relatives in Buffalo, N. Y. He has gone two weeks.

Frank Lepper has severed his connection with the Barry Shoe company, to accept a more lucrative position out of town.

John Sharkey of the Lowell Bleachery has returned to work after being confined to his home for some time as the result of an injury received while at work.

Charles Labourdian of the Federal Shoe company, well known as an amateur baseball player will in all probability be seen inside the wire cage as a basketball player this season.

The coming dance by the Primrose campers, a party of young men employed in the mills and factories in and around Lowell is sure to be well attended. Special attractions will add to the enjoyment of the affair.

The exhibition of Joe Sheehy and partner at a party held last evening was highly enjoyed. The most intricate steps were easily portrayed by this clever pair and they were given a grand hand on leaving the floor.

Mehal A. Lee, business agent of the Carpenters' union, who is also a candidate for representative on the progressive ticket is going about his campaign in a quiet manner without any show or bluster, something that isn't characteristic of politicians nowadays.

Plans for the Manufacturers' bowling league are being completed and the alleys will fairly hum with excitement this year. Charlie Farrell's Tremont and Suffolk wonders will have to hustle this year if they want to maintain the reputation as "champs." Charlie has all members of his team in training, however, and that counts for something.

The meeting of the members of the Put & Shaw Workers' union and their friends which will be held in Harrington hall, Oct. 4, gives promise of being very largely attended. Prominent officials in the organization have been engaged to be present and speak and a good time is promised. Daniel P. Whalen, local organizer of the union has full charge of arrangements and is putting in a whole lot of hard work to make the meeting a success.

L. B. of E. Workers Union Met
The International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers union met in the union headquarters in the Fiske building last evening. The meeting was largely attended and a great deal of important business was transacted. Five new members were admitted and three applications received. Several of the members submitted interesting reports and many spoke on the good of the union. The secretary reported the union to be run on a firm financial basis and everything progressing.

Millmen's Union Held Meeting
The Millmen's union held a largely attended meeting last night in the union rooms in the Fiske building. Considerable business of an important nature was transacted and two propositions were received and favorably acted upon. Communications from many sources were read and referred to the secretary. Committee reports were read and all discussed progress. Several of the members spoke on the good of the union and their remarks which were very interesting were attentively listened to. The secretary's report showed the union to be in a flourishing financial condition and every member working.

Lawrence Manufacturing Co.
The Lawrence Manufacturing Co., of Lawrence Hosiery as it is commonly called is one of the most complete manufacturing plants of its kind in this part of the country. Many improvements have been added in the last few years which have been of much benefit to the employees and it must be said that the generosity of the company has been fully appreciated.

This year the company furnished a ball ground for the young men of the plant which compares favorably with any in the city. They also furnished the team that represented the plant which are situated in Allen street are very large and there is plenty of room for two or three ball games to be played at the same time. It is not an unusual sight on Saturday afternoons, when baseball holds full sway to see four teams in hotly contested play on the diamonds which are as smooth as billiard tables. The team that represented the plant this year fully lived up to the generosity of the company by their record which is one to be proud of. In nineteen games played they have only been defeated three times and all have been hard fought struggles against the best teams in the city. The last game played was against the fast aggregation of ball tossers representing the C. M. A. club. The latter team succeeded in winning out, but only after every trick and stratagem point had been worked by both teams. Another meeting between these two teams will probably be arranged before the season is ended and it will be sure to attract a good deal of attention. Agent Walker is an enthusiastic follower of the ball team and never misses a game if he can possibly attend.

But to go back to the plant. The feature that strikes the visitor most forcibly is the thorough ventilation of the operating rooms; the almost total absence of lint; the good light that is provided by the systematic arrangement of machinery to secure the best results from ample window space, and the silence that pervades the place in spite of the fact that machines everywhere are whirling and twirling in their rapid and almost magical movements.

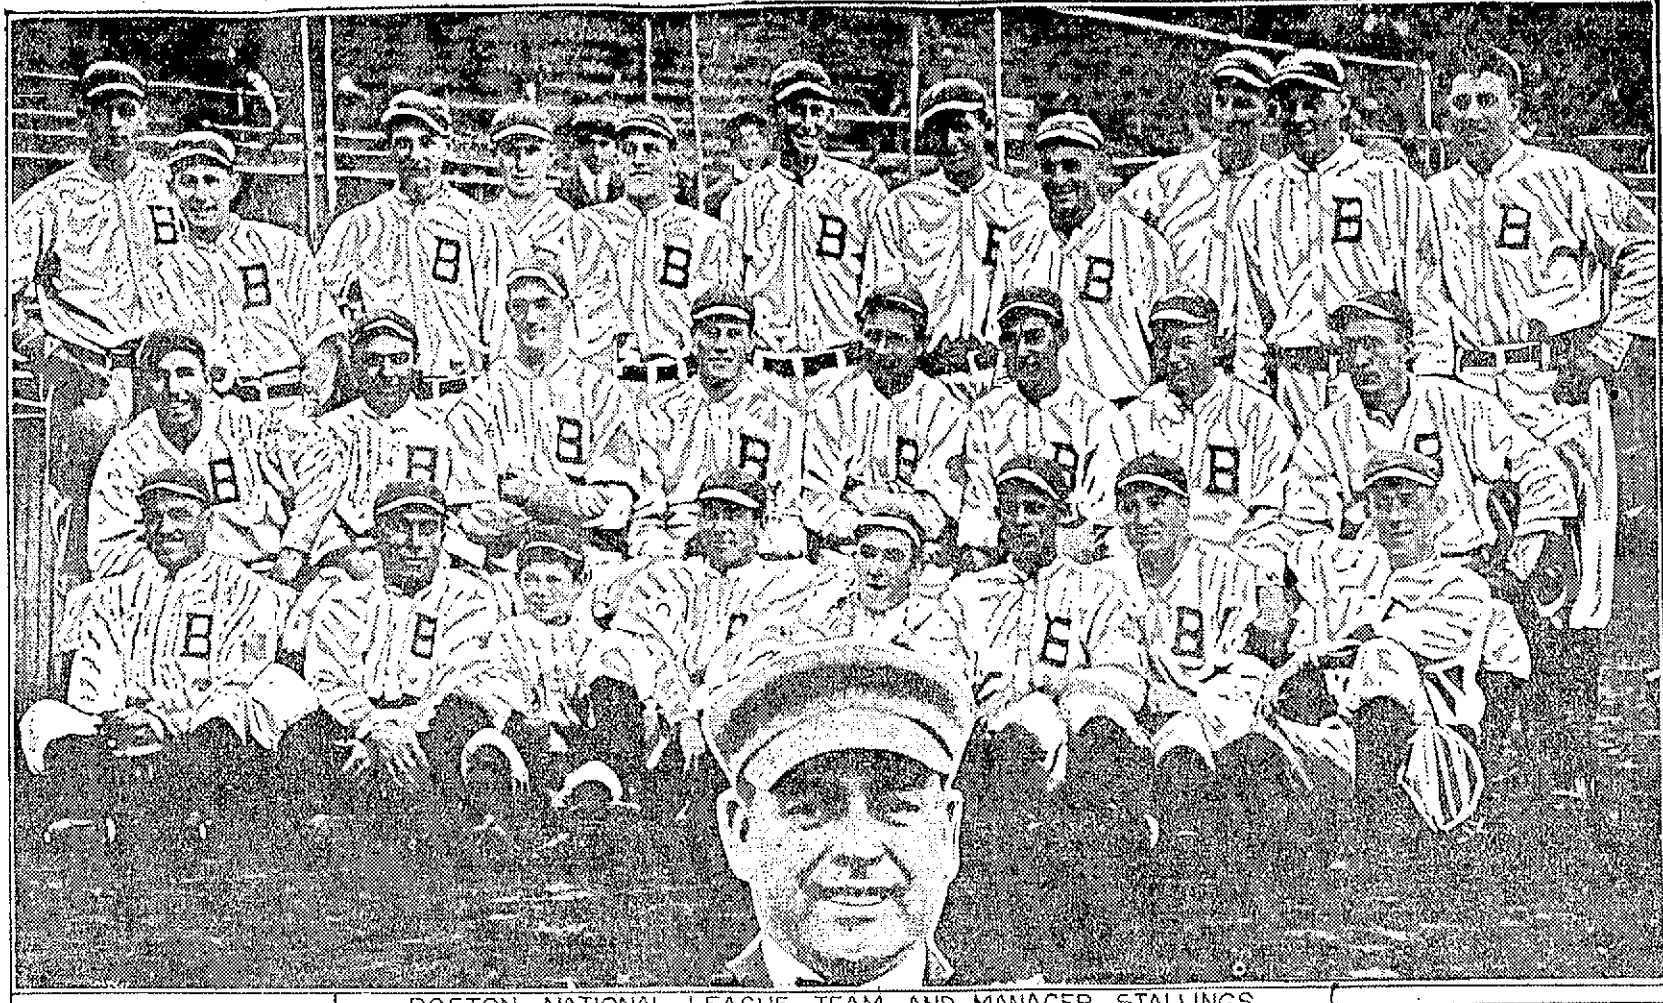

As the operatives move around their machines, each gives the appearance of simply being a member of a great big family going about some duty in the rooms of their own household. The whole tone of the place is on a high plane, and in looking over the plant as it moved so smoothly the writer felt that the company studies the needs of the employees as sincerely as its own financial interests.

At present the plant is running but four days a week owing to the business depression, but it is felt that this will not last long and that before the winter is upon us everything will be going full sway.

REPORT CONTRADICTED

BERLIN, Sept. 25 via London, Sept. 26.—Reports in the French press that Pope Benedict had made representations to Emperor William regarding the destruction of the cathedral of Rheims are contradicted in a despatch to the Cologne Gazette.

THE BOSTON BRAVES, CERTAIN WINNERS OF NATIONAL LEAGUE PENNANT

The Boston National baseball club, commonly called the Braves, have lived up to fondest expectations of George Stallings this year. In fact, Manager Stallings was the only man, possibly with the exception of Owner Gaffney, who really thought that the Braves had a chance to make more than a respectable showing this season after the first two months of the season had rolled by.

The history of this season in the National league race will go down in the baseball hall of fame. Never before has a club come up from the cellar position, after playing nearly a third of her games, and advanced without a pause until the top was reached.

Never before has a ball club set the sporting public throughout the country ablaze with enthusiasm as have the Boston Braves this year. It has been a wonderful season for George Stallings and the present standing of his club is fitting tribute to the character of the man. Although in last place and apparently hopelessly beaten Stallings nevertheless kept doggedly after every ball game on the schedule and finally began to receive some of the "breaks" which had been defeating him during the first of the season.

The Braves are now certain winners of the National league pennant for the season of 1914. The winning of yesterday's double header with the Cincinnati has made the Giants' chances practically negligible. The unremitting work of Manager Stallings has been successful and he and his club will take part in the world series.

The onward march of the Braves toward the pennant has upset the figuring of the country's baseball dopsters. On every hand the remark could be heard during the start of Boston's sport, "they'll soon break—Stallings has only three pitchers."

Such, indeed, was the truth. Stallings did only have three pitchers upon whom he could rely. Tyler, Rudolph and James were the twirlers upon whom Stallings and the Boston fans were forced to pin their hopes of ultimate success. But as it has proved these three men were enough. Working in regular turn, pitching at least two games a week, these three pitchers moved down the Braves' opponents with machine-like regularity.

The advent of Captain Johnny Evers into Boston baseball was another big factor in the Braves' success. The former Cub second baseman has proved a tower of strength at the pivotal position, superinduced as he has been by the lightning fielding of Rabbit Maranville. In common parlance today, Stallings, Evers and Maranville are known as the Braves' "Big Three."

Lowell fans will once more have an opportunity of witnessing world series contests near home. The first game of the world series will be played on October 5, the day following the finale of the big league's schedules. It is safe to say now that the Athletics and the Braves will be the two clubs in competition.

ATHLETES AND ATHLETICS

Brookton has joined the ranks of professional basketball and will place a fast team in the league down that way this winter. If this city had a suitable playing space Lowell would also be heard from.

Lowell Textile will start its football work next Tuesday. The first game on the calendar is that with Grafton, a tough aggregation as a rule. Textile is always handicapped every fall on account of the fact that the school opens late.

Although the Giants broke their losing streak yesterday and took the St. Louis club into camp their victory was of small value as the Braves won both ends of their double header with Cincinnati. There's nothing to it now but the Hub team for the world series.

H. H. Maguire, the Stoneham schoolboy, gave the Massachusetts milllmen a big surprise at the state meeting for riflemen at Wakefield. The 18-year-old schoolboy scored fifty bullets out of a possible fifty at 200 yards (slow fire).

A meeting of the National Baseball Commission will be held in Philadelphia next Wednesday to decide on plans for the world series. By that time, of course, whatever little doubt remains now as to the results in the American and National league races will be gone.

Once more Cravath with his four base bonanza won a game for the Phillies. The shagging right fielder has broken up many a game. It was Cravath's fourth home run of the week. Sherwood Magee of the Phillies has twice lifted the ball for the circuit this week.

GIANTS AND CUBS

Zimmerman Exchanged for Marquard and Two Utility Men

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Local baseball fans are interested today in a reported trade between the New York and Chicago National league clubs whereby the Giants secured Heinie Zimmerman, the Cubs' third baseman, in exchange for Pitcher Rube Marquard, Eddie Grant, utility insider, and Arthur Bues, also an insider. It is reported that while the deal had been completed none of the players mentioned except Bues who already has joined the Chicago club will change their uniforms this season. Officers of the New York club refuse to either deny or confirm the report.

Metzger After Zimmerman
It is said that Manager McGraw of the Giants has been negotiating for Zimmerman all season but that the National league club owners registered a protest against the sale or exchange of the Cub's third baseman until the close of the 1914 season. If Zimmerman had worn a New York uniform throughout this season the Giants would undoubtedly have hung on to their leadership.

FRENCH GUNBOAT SURPRISE TAKES COCOA BEACH IN KAMARUN—A BRILLIANT EXPLOIT

BORDEAUX, France, Sept. 26.—11.55 a. m.—The ministry of marine announced today that the French gunboat Surprise on Sept. 21 took possession of Cocoa Beach in Kamarun, the German colony in western equatorial Africa.

Victor Augagneur, the minister of marine, announced the capture of Cocoa Beach at the cabinet meeting this morning. He said that previous to landing her marines, who dislodged the German troops on shore, the Surprise, which is an unarmored vessel of 150 tons, sank two vessels belonging to the German auxiliary fleet, the Rhin and the Italo. M. Augagneur said that this capture was a brilliant exploit to the credit of the Surprise.

WHITE STAR LINER AFIRE AT HER PIER

Italian Reservists Who Spent Night in Steerage Were Routed by Smoke and Fled in Scant Attire to Pier—Police Called to Restore Order—Ship Was Due to Sail for Genoa at 8.30 This Morning

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—Sixteen hundred bales of cotton stored in the lower hold of the White Star liner, Cretic, caught fire early today as the vessel lay at her pier under steam and ready to weigh anchor for Genoa. Several hundred Italian reservists, crowded into the steerage overnight, were routed by smoke and fled in scant attire to the pier.

The fire gained headway rapidly. Within 15 minutes from the time the first wisp of smoke curled up from the second hatchway the blaze in the hold appeared to be a roaring furnace and a heavy cloud of smoke hung over the pier. Owing to the length of the pier and other obstacles the firemen were unable to get a stream into the Cretic's hold until fireboats came up and flooded the decks. In an hour and a half after the blaze started firemen were able to play their hose directly on the blaze for the first time. The flames meanwhile having gained much headway.

The ship was due to sail for Genoa at 8.30 o'clock this morning and in the steerage were many Italians who had spent the night there.

For a time the confusion on the pier was so great that panic among those on the pier seemed to impend. A heavy detachment of police reserves finally restored a semblance of order. Meantime the fire burned steadily and the volume of smoke spread up and down the river.

For more than two hours the flames seemed to be gaining headway, the smoke hampering the work of the firemen.

At first it was believed to be confined to one compartment but it was found that the fire was burning in holds four and five which the firemen could not flood. Hastily rigged ladders were brought into play and lowered into the burning compartments. By means of these, bales of cotton were hoisted from the holds and deposited on barges.

The ship itself was not burning, although she began to list heavily to port. The origin of the fire was not known.

A new crew, raw and untrained, added to the difficulties of the fire. The crew which the Cretic brought with her from Liverpool, was to be sent back today on the Olympic. There had been some dissatisfaction among them and the last batch, one hundred men, was paid off and discharged yesterday.

Shortly after ten o'clock the fire was believed to be under control. Only the cotton had been burned.

NEW ENGLAND SPIDERS.—WORCESTER, Sept. 25.—The New England Federation of Natural History societies opened a two days' conference in Horticultural hall yesterday, with an exhibition of rare specimens of insect, plant and bird life found in this section of the country.

One of the features of the display was an exhibit of 200 New England spiders and 200 butterflies and grasshoppers, shown by J. H. Emerson of Boston. Judge William T. Forbes of Worcester shows a big collection of insects which he has collected in the woods near Mrs. C. H. Maynard of Auburn had a display of Worcester county moths, Miss Esther Cunningham of Worcester has a noteworthy show of butterflies, and Mrs. Glenn Verne Power of Paxton shows a rare collection of butterflies and insects all collected in the Power farm in Paxton. John Drake also shows butterflies and the Worcester natural history society has a large exhibit of New England birds mounted in glass cases. The Boston Mushroom club is coming to the conference today, and on its way to Worcester members of the party are to stop off at places along the road and gather mushrooms to be exhibited.

The visitors were formally welcomed to Worcester at exercises held in the hall last night by Dr. Lemuel F. Woodward, president of the Worcester Natural History society. Joseph H. Perry of Worcester gave a talk on the geology of Worcester and J. H. Emerson of Boston gave a talk on "Spiders."

Bigamy Case Continued.—Charged with bigamy, Helen Stein was held yesterday by Judge Duff in the second session of the municipal court in 1914 for an examination Oct. 1. She was arrested by Detective Sgt. Irwin of the East Dedham street station on complaint of Ralph P. Doble of Stafford street, Roxbury, who said that he married her in 1905.

In March, 1910, she is alleged to have married Samuel Stein at Providence, and was working in Stein's restaurant when arrested by Irwin.

She was known as Helen Clayton when she married Doble in Canada. They separated and when he met her in this city recently she told him that she was married to Stein and living happily.

RUSSIAN DETACHMENT PLAYS CLEVER TRICK

Cossacks and Artillerymen Pretend Retreat and Austrians Rose to the Bait—No Decisive Results From the Battle of the Aisne—Rain Causes Change in German Operations—Downpour Drives Germans From Their Trenches

PETROGRAD, Sept. 25, 6.45 a. m.—The Russkoe Slovo has obtained from wounded soldiers, it states, a description of a clever ruse whereby a small Russian detachment in Galicia virtually wiped out a large Austrian force. In its account of the incident it says:

"According to a prearranged plan, several squadrons of Cossacks and artillerymen, simulating retreat, began to fall back rapidly under cover of the infantry."

"The Austrians rose to the bait and emerged from their trenches in pursuit in the direction of Small river, where companies of Russian infantry checked the furious Austrian onslaught. Cossacks and artillery, crossing by a bridge entrenched themselves on the opposite bank, posting several machine guns while the artillery hid their guns in trenches under the bushes unperceived by the enemy."

"When the preparations were complete for the enemy's reception, the infantry hurriedly retreated to the opposite bank where they pretended to set fire to the bridge as though intending to cut off the enemy's advance."

"The Austrian troops, seeing before them a small body of Russians, blindly charged. The enemy's infantry, with shouts of victory approached the bridge, while their cavalry dashed through the river. A terrific explosion was heard and the bridge which was crowded with massed Austrian columns was blown to pieces while on the opposite bank the Russian guns and quick firers scattered death among the advancing Austrians until the river was choked with bodies."

"Panic-stricken, the foe attempted to flee, throwing away their weapons, but the Cossacks consummated the work of demolition, fording the stream and pursuing the enemy with yells of triumph."

"Half an hour later it was all over and several Austrian battalions had ceased to exist."

PAUS STILL WAITS FOR NEWS OF SOME DECISIVE RESULTS IN BATTLE OF THE AISNE.

PARIS, Sept. 25, 8.50 a. m.—For 14 days the battle of the Aisne has continued, practically without cessation, and still Paris waits for news of some decisive result.

Here and there, according to the official communications the line has given way to one side or to the other, but the importance of these incidents, if any, on the final result has not yet become apparent.

The latest French official statement mentions several such movements. On the French left wing to the northwest of Noyon where the French apparently have been trying to outflank the German right, the French advanced troops, it is announced, were compelled to give a little ground, having come in contact with superior forces. Fresh troops were brought up, however, and the French offensive was vigorously resumed. The communication says the struggle in this region has become extremely violent.

Similarly on the heights of the Meuse the Germans have had successes, but they have not succeeded, the French communication says in crossing the river.

The French report, however, that on their right wing the Germans have begun to give way to attacks coming from Nancy and Toul while in the southern regions of Woerwe the enemy is also retreating, but the action continues.

DOWNPOUR OF RAIN DRIVES GERMAN FROM TRENCHES AND CHANGES PLANS.

LONDON, Sept. 25, 4.22 a. m.—The correspondent of the Daily Mail in France says that rain has resulted in a change in the German operations on the Aisne. The chukly soil, he says, holds water in the trenches like a cup and the autumn downpour, therefore, has driven the Germans out of their trenches and forced them to fight in the open, where the French get at them with their bayonets.

The fighting at St. Quentin, according to the correspondent, has been fierce and determined. The Germans drove the French out and secured a large part of the town which they held by means of their maxims. The French, he thinks, could have expelled them by a bombardment, but feared that this would set the town afire and cause great loss of life among the inhabitants.

MAJ. TANKAVITCH IS FOUND DEAD IN FIELD WHERE HE COMMANDED A BATTERY OF ARTILLERY.

LONDON, Sept. 25.—The Rome correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph company says that Maj. Roja Tankavitch, to whose batteries the source of the present war was traceable, has, according to a Vienna dispatch, been found dead by Austrians near Krupagne, where he commanded a battery of artillery in a recent battle.

Maj. Tankavitch was formally charged by the Austrian government with supplying from the Serbian arms factory the revolvers with which the Archduke Franz Ferdinand and his wife, the Princess of Lothenberg, were assassinated at Sarajevo, the Bosnian capital.

GENERAL VON KLUCK THE TURKISH DIPLOMAT

General VON KLUCK.

General Alexander von Kluck, commander of the German right wing, who has fought hard against repeated attacks of the allies, but has been steadily forced back and threatened with envelopment, was born at Munster, Westphalia in 1844. He became a colonel on Jan. 27, 1895, and a lieutenant general in 1902. He commanded the Fifth army corps in 1906 and the First army corps in 1907. He was raised to the nobility in 1909. He is one of the most important figures in the great battle now raging in France.

DISPLEASES WILSON AND IS RECALLED—FOREIGN DIPLOMATIC CORPS IS LOOKING FOR SHAKEUP

A. RUSTEM BEY.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—With the announcement that A. Rustem Bey, Turkish ambassador to the United States, has been recalled members of the foreign diplomatic corps are looking for a general shakeup among those foreign representatives who have been indulging in newspaper criticisms and comments on the foreign policy of the United States. Within a short time, according to information current in diplomatic circles, the British government will announce the dismissal of Sir Lionel Carden, former minister to Mexico, whose criticisms of the president's policy have given offense to this government. In a letter to the president the Turkish ambassador announces within a fortnight he will leave Washington on a "leave of absence." There seems, however, to be no question the "leave of absence" will be a permanent one and that it was "granted" by the Ottoman government on the strength of plain intimations from Washington that the ambassador's usefulness had been impaired materially by his statement in the press. In it he sought to justify extreme measures taken by his government against the Christians in Armenia, by suggesting the United States perhaps would take similar measures if it discovered a conspiracy between the negroes of this country and the Japanese to bring about an overthrow of the American government.

GERMANS PREPARED FOR PRESENT WAR

Heavy Artillery Placed on Concrete Platforms—Quantities of Stores Found in French Towns—Great Preparations for Invasion

LONDON, Sept. 26.—An Englishman writing from the Maubeuge district reveals some of the remarkable preparations which he alleges were made by the Germans for the present war. This man in his letter says:

"The Germans installed a long time before the war certain portions of some of their big 42 centimetre guns on a farm, under the pretext that they were boring for water. They put in foundations of concrete so that everything was ready. As their guns had a longer range than those of the Maubeuge forts it was not difficult for them to conquer."

"The Paris correspondent of the London Chronicle confirms the foregoing and adds that all the German heavy artillery was placed on concrete platforms selected some years ago as foundations for factories never to be completed."

Related reports giving intimate details of the occupation of Alsace and Combray from which cities the Germans subsequently were driven, throw further light on what in England is characterized as German advance preparations for invasion. According to these stories, in almost every French town through which the German army swept some one in the ranks would point out where he had, until recently, resided as an inconspicuous citizen. Through such men great quantities of stores were found and this, together with the knowledge of the country gained by such soldier residents, have proved of immense value."

The isolation of the Galician stronghold of Przemyśl, heretofore emphasized in dispatches from Petrograd as forecasting a triumphant Russian march to Cracow and thence to Vienna and Budapest, apparently has been made complete by the occupation of Khyrow, 26 miles south of Przemyśl and close to the junction of railroad lines connecting with Jaroslaw, the important railroad center taken by the Russian troops several days ago.

On the British Isles the public is awaiting with keen interest the outcome of Premier Asquith's appeal to the Irish as voiced in Dublin last night. With a Welsh army corps already in a tentative stage of formation, Englishmen believe that the Irish will not be outdone.

WORKING DAY AND NIGHT

EDINBURGH, Sept. 26.—A Scotch woman who has returned here from Germany, where she has been staying with friends at Essen, relates that work is going on at the Krupp gun factory day and night. The gun and ammunition departments alone are being operated, but these keep 14,000 men constantly employed.

This woman relates, also, that foreign spies have been numerous and that one day 14 Russians dressed as women were shot. She says that food is abundant in Essen and some of it is even cheaper than before the war.

FRENCH STILL STRIVING
TO OUTFLANK VON KLUCK

Fierce Fighting in the Region of Noyon—Allies Make Slight Advance—Fresh Troops Hammering at German Right Wing—French Line Forced Back—Russians Prepare to Attack City of Cracow in Galicia—Inhabitants Reported to be Fleeing

ROME, Sept. 26, via London.—The fleets of Great Britain and France are today bombarding heavily all the fortified Austrian positions in the vicinity of Cattaro in Dalmatia. A wireless despatch received from the commandant of the French fleet announces that the powerful Austrian fortress of Pelagora has been dismantled.

BIG BATTLE RAGING

A battle of extraordinary severity is raging at the western end of the Anglo-French and German battle line in the region of Noyon, 60 miles to the north of Paris, where the French still are striving to outflank General Von Kluck's reinforced army. The French official statement issued this afternoon claims that the allied troops have made a slight advance.

On the eastern end of the fighting line the French officially admit that their line has been forced back by the Germans across the river Meuse near St. Mihiel, a point about 20 miles to the south of the French fortress of Verdun.

In the eastern arena the Russians are preparing to attack the important Austrian fortified city of Cracow in Galicia. The inhabitants of the city are reported to be fleeing and the civil government is said to have been assumed by the Germans.

Russians operating against the fortress of Przemyśl have captured two towns to the north and south of the position and have completely cut off its railway communication.

The French ministry of marine today announced that a landing force from the gunboat Surprise has hoisted the French flag over Coco Beach in the German colony of Kamerun, in Africa.

British forces from the Union of South Africa, have occupied Laderitzbucht, a town in German southwest Africa, where the Germans retreated after blowing up the railroad.

China has protested against the occupation by Japanese troops of Wei-Hsien, a town of Shantung province outside the zone set apart by the Chinese government for the Japanese military operations against the German concession of Kiao Chow.

MAN HELD IN $5000
ON CHARGE OF ARSON

Young Sailor Passed Bogus Check and is Held for Trial—Lester Hill Charged With Violation of Insurance Laws

It is quite a sudden shift to change from police court interpreter to prisoner with a $5000 bond the price of freedom, but such was the move that circumstances forced upon Hipolito Buslewitz in police court this noon.

Buslewitz was acting as interpreter in an assault and battery case when Supt. Welch, accompanied by Chief Inspector of Fires Charles P. Rice and Inspector Edward F. Horrigan of the state police stepped into the courtroom. After looking at the man a moment the officers withdrew, but as soon as the case was concluded the heavy hand of the law was laid upon Buslewitz's shoulder and he was led away. Daniel J. Donahue appeared for the defendant and the case was continued until next Friday. Buslewitz was held in $5000 bail. The charge against him is arson in connection with an East Merrimack street fire.

Violating Insurance Laws

Lester A. Hill, formerly in the insurance business, was before the court this morning on a warrant sworn out by State Officer Keating, under the direction of the state insurance commissioner, charging Hill with a violation of the insurance laws. The case was continued till next Friday.

Passed Bogus Check

M. H. Chandler, a sailor on one of Uncle Sam's battleships, have merrily into this port a few days ago, short of money but well supplied with nerve. M. H. then picked Joseph L. Pepin and began to devise ways and means of "skinning" him.

Mr. Pepin, who is a tailor, stated to the court this morning that the defendant slipped him a bad check and that he gave him three silver dollars in exchange. Also Chandler purposed having a suit made and in fact did have it made but he did not produce the necessary long green and therefore the suit was also a dead loss.

Chandler told the court this morning that he had left his ship at New York and departed on a month's furlough. His ship is now at Portsmouth harbor but to all appearances Chandler is safely anchored in Market street. That's the way it looked this morning at least.

He is a young man of clean appearance, but evidently he has discovered that a check book even without funds in the bank, is a big asset to a stranded traveler. Supt. Welch stated that the bank upon which the check was drawn told him over the wire that many checks of the same sort Chandler worked on the local man have been received by them.

Chandler has until Monday night to get back to his shipmates before he is branded as a deserter. His furlough has run out but the ten days clause gives him a chance to get back always, provided, of course, that he can make an exit from the local "coolie." His case was put over until Monday morning.

Minor Cases

The longest list of minor offenders which has faced Judge Enright this week were arraigned today. An assault and battery case in which John Balchous was accused of mugging up Anthony Dixon to quite a hearty extent, occupied much of the court's time this morning and finally had to go over until Monday with the defense still to be heard from. J. J. O'Connor appeared for the defense and Daniel J. Donahue for the prosecution.

A young girl, who claimed New York as her home, pleaded guilty to drunkenness for the second time within a short space. Judge Enright advised her to pack up and go back to New York before she was again roped into the police net. Thomas Hayes, a Fall River citizen, was given the same cue.

TWO DOUBLE HEADERS

Big Jeff Tesreau pitched the New York Giants to victory in the first game of the double header this afternoon at the Pittsburgh Pirates by a 4-2 score. Pittsburgh scored seven runs off Tesreau while New York's nine bingles came at opportune moments.

The Braves also won their first battle with Chicago. Lefty Tyler, former Lowell N. E. league twirler, beat the Cubs in this contest 2-1. Boston played errorless ball.

In the other two National league double bills St. Louis lost to Brooklyn 6-3, and Cincinnati went down before the Phillies, 10-8. In the American league, Washington lost the first game to Cleveland by a 6-1 score through bad fielding and all around inferior baseball. The Red Sox were leading the St. Louis club, 2-1, in the fifth inning at the time of going to press.

Morse of Chicago, who were returning to their home from their summer place in Newfane, Vt., in an automobile were killed here today by being thrown from the vehicle after it had skidded on the street car tracks and upset against a heap of loose sand. The younger man was instantly killed. The elder Morse died in a few minutes.

Identification of the bodies was made by the coroner and medical examiner who found business cards and letters in the clothing. There were also directions to notify relatives in New York, New Jersey and Chicago, in case of accident.

ENGLISH AERIAL RAID DAMAGES ZEPPELIN

GENEVA, Switzerland, Sept. 26, 4.22 a. m.—A telegram from Basel states that the recent English aerial raid on Dusseldorf, a depot for Zeppelins, resulted in the damage of one Zeppelin but the extent of the injury wrought is not known. A second bomb is reported to have destroyed part of a machinery shed in the vicinity containing duplicate pieces for the aircraft while a third bomb fell in a meadow. No deaths are reported.

As an immediate result of the aerial raid, says the telegram, all cathedral towns along the Rhine, especially at Cologne and Strassburg, are now flying large white flags while the dimensions of the Red Cross flags on the hospitals have been increased.

BIRDMEN FLY AT HEIGHT OF MILE AND A QUARTER

PARIS, Sept. 26, 8.25 a. m.—An aviator who has just returned from the front tells of the difficulty encountered by the flying men on reconnaissance duty. He said:

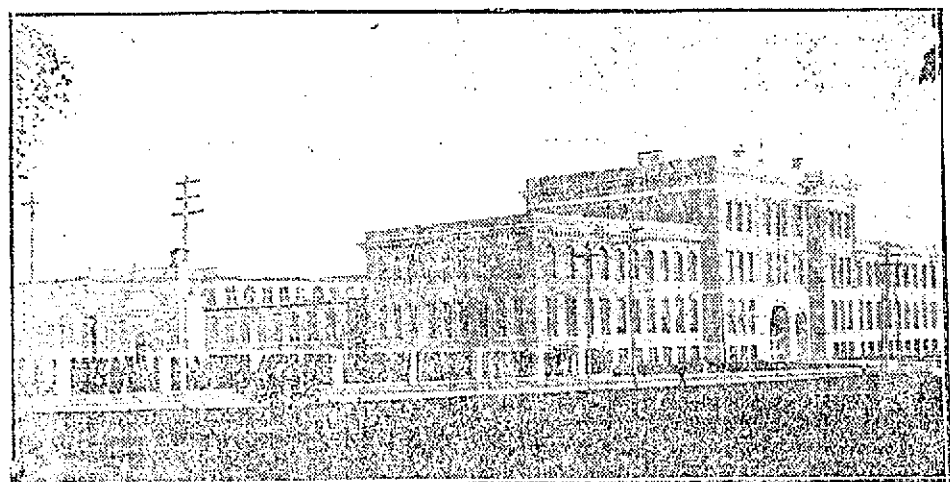

"We are obliged to fly at a height of about one mile and a quarter, which makes observation difficult, as small objects, even with the aid of the strongest glasses assume unfamiliar shapes and become fore-shortened. If we fly under that height we are greeted by a hail of rifle fire which is far more effective than the cannon. We fear the rifles more than the bursting shells as the fire of the regiments concentrated on a single object is far more deadly."

BAVARIAN SOLDIERS UNDER ARREST IN BRUSSELS

LONDON, Sept. 26.—The correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph Co. at Ostend is responsible for the statement given out in London today that a number of Bavarian soldiers are under arrest in Brussels charged with facilitating the escape of a large body of French prisoners from the Belgian capital. A court of inquiry is sitting to investigate the matter. The number of Frenchmen who are said to have gotten away are placed at several thousand. The Bavarians are greatly incensed at the charges against them. This story lacks confirmation from other sources.

LOWELL TEXTILE SCHOOL TO PRODUCE GERMAN DYES

THE LOWELL TEXTILE SCHOOL

And Redeem the Textile Business of This Country From Dependence on Foreign Supply — Principal Eames Tells How it Will be Accomplished Here in Lowell—New Buildings are Necessary

The management of the Lowell Textile school has taken up in earnest the problem of manufacturing the textile dye stuffs that have been formerly manufactured in Germany and that have been cut off by the European war. The Lowell Textile school, the best of the kind in the world, is setting its experts to work on the task of producing these dyes for the trade and thus obviate the need of waiting until the Germans are ready to resume business, which may not be for a year or two.

The Textile school has given special attention to the manufacture of dyes for some years past and can now undertake this new problem with great confidence. It has already trained men in the art of producing the colorfast dyes, but will now redouble its efforts in this direction.

One cannot talk long with Principal Charles H. Eames of the Textile school without being impressed with the great significance of the work to which this school is about to devote special attention. In an interview with a representative of The Sun last evening Mr. Eames went over every phase of the subject, avoiding anything like extravagant optimism, but showing clearly in what a thorough and confident spirit the greatest textile school in America is planning to free American industry from needless dependence on foreign nations. Throughout his talk, Principal Eames frequently emphasized the fact that the great war has opened up a vast field to the young American who, with the proper training and temperament, gives a few years to the study of dye manufacture and application. The initiative in the domestic manufacture of dyes must come from the manufacturers, but the Lowell Textile school is getting ready on a large scale so that when it does come American industry will have at hand a trained body of experts ready for any demand that may be made upon them.

As a very practical illustration of his views, Mr. Eames prefaced his remarks by calling attention to six samples of yarn, three of which had been dyed in Germany and three of which had been dyed at the textile school. Two were a rich crimson, known technically as "fast red," two were brilliant orange and the remaining two were a soft yellow. When the American-dyed yarn and the German-dyed yarn of the same shade were put together, it was impossible to tell where the one ended and the other began.

Principal Eames' Statement

"We are about to devote special attention," said Mr. Eames, "to industrial chemistry as embodied in a three or four year course in the manufacture of dyestuffs—not for sale but as a training for our pupils and so as to use them here. Our course will be arranged on a commercial as well as an experimental basis. In the past, we were limited as to time, but by giving a four-year course instead of three to chemistry and dyeing, it will be possible for us to attend to every phase of practical dye-making as well as to the after processes of application. The textile manufacturers are feeling their way carefully, but already new companies are being formed and the birth of new American enterprises daily opens up vast possibilities for young men such as we hope and plan to turn out here."

School Stands Alone

No other school in the country is doing exactly as we are doing; they do make organic compounds, but they do not go as far as we do in practical dye-making. In the line of applied chemistry, no other school pays attention to the application of dyestuffs to textile materials. With the training which a student has here he has two wide fields open to him: the field of dye manufacture and the field of application of dye-stuffs. Needless to say, there will be a great demand in both branches of the textile industry if conditions turn out as generally anticipated.

In order to do the type of work expected in this course, a boy must have a thorough preparation. The management has believed that applicants must have a high school education or its equivalent; it would not be possible to go into the work mapped out, if the students have less preparation. The textile school would not have been able to develop had we not adopted a policy of high requirements years ago. We aimed at raising the standard, and we have succeeded.

In the history of the American textile industry there has not been a more propitious time for a young man to become an expert. This is the time to get into the school. We are in the trough of the sea at present, but we are bound to rise. In two, or three, or four years we will be ready for the crest of the wave and there will be a great demand for the products of our mills. This country has not sought to profit by another's loss, but there is a brighter side; there is a certain philanthropy in being able to meet the wants of other countries, even if in doing so we incidentally advance the cause of American industry and prosperity.

As to our course in dye making: We will first of all devote special attention to what has been already established, we will turn out men ready for any requirement of the business. We will give a great deal more space and time to this phase of our work and it is possible that in the near future we may have to erect new buildings as certain processes in the intended course ought to be done outside the present buildings.

Studied German System

Mr. Eames also went into some details of German dye manufacture as he saw them personally abroad a year or two ago and was struck in praise of the German system which has given them such a hold on the dyeing and chemical end of the textile industry. In speaking of the practical details of the work abroad he said that the staff of instructors will remain in the same, with one addition, Mr. Andrew Younger, will be an instructor in the weaving department. He graduated from the school in two courses, that of design and woollen weaving and finishing, and has for some time past been an employee of the American Woolen company.

Following is a list of dyes made and used practically in the textile school, some of which have been made for years and all of which have been thoroughly tested before being used in the yards and fabrics.

Fluorescein, eosin, safranine, alizarine, malachite green, methyl violet, fast red A, orange II, methylene blue, fast green O, various lake colors and many intermediate products.

MATTY BALDWIN

To Meet "Harlem Tommy" Murphy in Boston Ring Tuesday

Matty Baldwin of Charlestown, the lightweight champion of N. E. and "Harlem Tommy" Murphy of New York, is the attraction that will draw thousands of boxing followers to the Atlas A. A. next Tuesday night. The boxers have been signed up to box 12 rounds at 133 lbs., weigh at 8 p.m.

It would be a difficult matter to match any two boxers in any class who can satisfy the spectators better than this same team. They have met a number of times, and the question of superiority is still in the air, but it should be settled for good next Tuesday night, as they box for a decision.

Baldwin and Murphy have been boxing for nearly fifteen years. They are both married, Baldwin being the father of three children, while Tommy is the father of two. They are direct opposites in boxing as well as in other ways. Murphy is fast and clever, while the Bunker Hill boy depends on his rugged style of milling to win his battles, although he can box cleverly when the occasion arises, and is considered the best ring general in the country. Baldwin has a decision over Willie Titchele, and Tommy lost a close verdict to the champion in a 20 round match last year. Murphy and Baldwin are boxing in their best form at the present time. Murphy showed he has lost none of his cunning and speed last Tuesday by defeating Frank Collins, the rugged Brooklyn, N. Y. lightweight. Baldwin has defended his title successfully the past year against all contenders.

The preliminary bill for this show is the least ever staged in Boston. Levy, a rug-defending Frank Collins, Y. meets Dave Powers of Malden in the opening 6 round bout.

"Kid" Chetkas of Manchester, N. H. faces Tommy Davis of Cambridge in the other 6 round affair, and a rugged mill is expected when they clash. The 8 round semi-final will be between Larry Burns, the hard hitting Lawrence boy and Tommy Rowan, a willing New York boy who comes here with a good reputation won in hard battles in the metropolis.

AYER CO. NOT TO CLOSE

When asked as to whether the rumor that the Ayer company would soon close for a short time, Dr. Stearns today emphatically denied that the plant would close. The business of the company, he said, has been hard hit by the war; but the foreign business from neutral countries will be sufficient to keep the works busy. Some changes have been made in the employment, but there is no intention of shutting down. There will be as usual, a period of slackness in October.

HILD FOR SUPREME COURT

RATH, Mo., Sept. 26.—At the conclusion of a brief hearing on the charge of murder, preferred against Samuel T. Hinkley of Georgetown for the fatal shooting of Charles Barnes of Five Islands last Sunday, Hinkley was bound over to the supreme court yesterday.

Since his confinement, Hinkley has been examined by four physicians as to his sanity, and it is understood his mental condition will figure prominently in his defense.

ASQUITH ASKS IRISH TO FIGHT

Hearty Greeting Extended the Premier in Dublin Last Night

Nationalist Volunteers Appear as Guard of Honor

DUBLIN, via London, Sept. 26.—Premier Asquith appeared at the Mansion house here last night for the purpose, as he expressed it in the opening of his speech, "as the head of the king's government to summon loyal and patriotic Ireland to take her place in defense of our common cause."

The prime minister received a tremendous welcome when he appeared at the Mansion house with John E. Redmond, the Irish nationalist leader, and the Earl of Aberdeen, lord lieutenant of Ireland, and his opening words aroused the greatest enthusiasm. He went on to say that there had been wars with regard to which there was a diversity of opinion, but that was not the case today.

Today, he declared, throughout the empire, without distinction of creed, party or race, climate or class or section, the people were united in defending the principle of maintaining interests which were vital, not only to the British Empire but to all that was worth having in our common civilization and the future progress of mankind, whether Great Britain succeeded or failed.

"But," he exclaimed, "we are not going to fail." There could not be any higher cause, said the premier, than the vindication of international good faith and protection of the weak against the violence of the strong and those who preached a practical religion of force, Germany was the real responsible factor in this war.

There was nothing in the quarrel, such as it was, between Austria and Serbia, that could not be settled by pacific means, but for the fact that, in the judgment of those guiding and controlling the German policy, the hour had come to strike the blow which had long been deliberately prepared.

In their hands, declared Mr. Asquith, lay the choice between peace and war, and their election was for war.

"The invasion of Belgium and France," said the prime minister, constituted the blackest pages of war's somber history. England had worked to the last for peace. "The old animosities are dead. What Great Britain asks, what she believes Ireland is ready to give," he said, "is a free will offering of people."

Mr. Redmond, who followed, said he had promised the archbishop of Malines that Ireland would bring her arms and strength to avenge Louvain. "It is Ireland's duty to fight," declared the Irish nationalist leader. "Great Britain has kept faith with Ireland and Ireland will keep faith with Great Britain."

Great crowds gathered in the streets of Dublin and cheered the Nationalist Volunteers, who, armed with rifles and bayonets, acted as a guard of honor.

LOWELL OPERA HOUSE

The Opera House, which has been closed for the past week, reopens Monday with James P. Lee and company of eighteen people. In Mr. Lee's new success, "The Funny Moon," Mr. Lee is an comedian and the only actor in this new vehicle he has one well adapted to his special line of funmaking. "The Funny Moon" is a fast moving farce comedy with numerous gags and many complications. In order to extract himself from the embarrassing positions into which he is thrust by the multiplicity of the temperamental disturbances of his household, he is compelled to—well, we wouldn't say that he lies, nor would we intimate in the least degree that he was a prevaricator, but if he was walking down the street with Ananias on one side and Sapphira on the other, we would say that the man in the humor of his family. His propensity for trouble out-shines Happy Holligan in his halcyon days and his intellectual attempts to ride the temperamental waves are ludicrous in the extreme.

Accompanying the "Funny Moon" is a galaxy of laughs, arising from a farce in which it has been produced. Rippling, silvery, joyous laughter, that is what the "Funny Moon" is all about up in one great comedy. There is going to be a "Cinderella of Fun" when it arrives. The company will remain at the Opera House for one week and will change their bill twice during that period. Be sure and be at hand Monday and see the dash for fun.

JAPANESE ARMY

Embassy Issues Statement Based on Reports From Tokio

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—The Japanese embassy today issued the following statement based on reports from Tokio.

"Recent cablegrams from China can only be credited with a grain of salt. There are no efforts now being used in China, as elsewhere, to give color to domestic newspaper reports and telegrams going abroad. Groundless reports designed to cast a slur on the reputation of the Japanese soldiers are thus more or less discredited."

The alleged ruthless conduct of Japanese troops in Shantung said to be contained in a letter coming from Lanchow is nothing more nor less than a malicious canard.

"A despatch addressed to the Shang mercury by a foreigner living in Peking says in part:

"The right discipline of the Japanese army and the decorum of the rank and file are simply laudable. After the landing of Japanese troops the citizens are at ease and the markets are calm. As to Chinese women, the Japanese are taking scrupulous care not to annoy them in any wise. The Japanese soldiers are received everywhere with honor and respect."

"In fine, the Japanese soldiers are living up to their reputation as established at the time of the Russo-Japanese war and the Boxer trouble. The strictest maintenance of military discipline and the utter abstention from unnecessary molestations are their code of behavior."

will be featured at the B. F. Keith theatre, next week, when "Miss Ideal," the daring swimmer and diver, will appear in her unique act. "Miss Ideal" is really Miss Irene Deal, and she is a native of Brookline, Mass. She had been diving and swimming for a number of years when she suddenly broke into the limelight through a most unusual circumstance.

By a happy coincidence, "Miss Ideal" had very little difficulty in selecting her stage name, for in real life she is really Miss Irene Deal, and she is a native of Brookline, Mass. She had been diving and swimming for a number of years when she suddenly broke into the limelight through a most unusual circumstance.

There was nothing in the quarrel, such as it was, between Austria and Serbia, that could not be settled by pacific means, but for the fact that, in the judgment of those guiding and controlling the German policy, the hour had come to strike the blow which had long been deliberately prepared.

A decree for desertion was granted by the court.

PROTEST ASSESSMENTS

FITCHBURG TAXPAYERS INSTRUCT COMMITTEE TO APPEAL TO COMMISSIONERS

FITCHBURG, Sept. 26.—A committee consisting of Albert E. Wright, John P. Miller and George H. Roy has been appointed, as a result of a protest meeting of property owners of the city against what they term unjust taxation, to visit the board of assessors and learn why the valuation of their property has been put so high this year. It is claimed that some property has been increased in valuation 90 per cent, and that the average increase has been levied upon the small real estate owners.

This special committee has been authorized by some 500 taxpayers and property owners to secure legal counsel, if necessary, and to take the matter before the tax commissioners should the occasion require, to determine the right of the assessors to place a valuation upon property larger than it can bring at a public sale. The committee will meet the assessors next week.

MACEY SET AT LIBERTY

SUSPECT ARRESTED UPON HIS ARRIVAL IN ENGLAND WAS GIVEN FREEDOM TODAY

LONDON, Sept. 26.—120 p. m.—James T. Macey of Denver, Colo., whose invalid wife committed suicide in London, Aug. 8, after being driven out of an Antwerp hospital by the outbreak of hostilities, was today set at liberty at Portsmouth, where he had been held in custody as a suspect. He was detained by the British authorities, along with three other Americans until his citizenship was proved and he had explained the object of his trip.

LOSS ABOUT $2000

Blaze at Furniture Store of N. Tashkin in North Adams Last Night

NORTH ADAMS, Sept. 26.—Fire in the furniture store of N. Tashkin in the Carnegie block last night caused damage of about $2000. The fire started in a mattress and matting storeroom and had been blazing for some time when discovered by an occupant of one of the tenements overhead. The heat cracked all the plate-glass windows in the front of the store. The fire, however, was confined to the interior of the store.

COULD NOT STAND ON FEET

Mrs. Baker So Weak—Could Not Do Her Work—Found Relief In Novel Way.

Adrian, Mich.—"I suffered terribly with female weakness and backache and got so weak that I could hardly do my work. When I washed my dishes I had to sit down and when I would sweep the floor I would get so weak that I would have to get a drink every few minutes, and before I I would have to lie down. I got so poorly that my folks thought I was going into consumption. One day I found a piece of paper blowing around the yard and I picked it up and read it. It said 'Saved from the Grave,' and told what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for women. I showed it to my husband and he said, 'Why don't you try it?' So I did, and after I had taken two bottles I felt better and I said to my husband, 'I don't need any more,' and he said 'You had better take it a little longer anyway.' So I took it for three months and got well and strong."—Mrs. ALONZO E. BAKER, 9 Tecumseh St., Adrian, Mich.

Not Well Enough to Work.
In these words is hidden the tragedy of many a woman, housekeeper or wage earner who supports herself and is often helping to support a family, on meagre wages. Whether in house, office, factory, shop, store or kitchen, woman should remember that there is one tried and true remedy for the ills to which all women are prone, and that is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It promotes that vigor which makes work easy and restores the system to a healthy normal condition.

RIVER BOULEVARD WORK

Essex County Commission and the State Highway Commission Completing the Lawrence End

The state highway commission is giving its attention to Lawrence because the officials there put forward their demands. The following item is from a Lawrence paper:

Salem, Sept. 25.—At the annual highway conference at Salem yesterday before Chairman Sohler and member James W. Ryan of Pittsfield, the claims of Methuen were eloquently argued by Supt. of Streets R. W. Dow who asked if the commission could give any information as to what they would do on the petition for the acceptance of Jackson street in their town. Col. Sohler replied that they were going to be up that way today as they would inspect the Lawrence.

Lowell boulevard with the Essex county commissioners to see what had to be done on that—he expected that the state would have to surface that street about two inches and on the amount to be spent there would depend action as to Jackson street.

It, W. George also urged the acceptance and asked as to what course was to be pursued in building a sidewalk on a state road. Col. Sohler said that they must apply for a permit and then the engineer would look it over and tell them what to do.

Selectman Lyons of Methuen also urged the claims of Methuen saying that most of their state highway helped Lawrence more than it did them. A city got all the benefit from through highways as the travelers left their money in the stores there.

WORCESTER, Sept. 26.—Starting a minute after Hardy of Marlboro, Henry Miron of Abington swam from the Lincoln street bridge to Singers dam, the length of the lake, in 1 hour and 53 minutes, 28 seconds. Hardy's time was 2 hours, 25 minutes, 45 seconds.

Miron, using his overarm stroke, after touching the finish swim back and met Hardy a half mile down the course. He then continued on with the Marlboro swimmer and, putting on a burst of speed, beat him again to the finish by 40 yards.

F. A. Sanderson of Worcester offers to back Miron for $500 to beat Hardy over the same course at any time and is willing to give the latter a liberal margin.

MATHEWS MAKE PLANS

FOR SERIES OF SMOKE TALKS WITH PROMINENT SPEAKERS—TO BE HELD IN DECEMBER

A special meeting of the Mathew Temperance Institute will be held this evening and President Walter T. Powers expect a large attendance. Action will be taken on the report of a committee recently appointed to consider holding an event early in December.

Next week a proposed amendment to the constitution, providing for a return to the old custom of having the regular meetings of the society on Tuesday evenings, will come up for consideration.

John E. O'Neill has been elected chairman of the board of trustees and Edward F. Draper, secretary. Frank G. Lincoln, treasurer, will submit his first quarterly report at the next meeting. Rev. Dr. Tracy of Brighton, the new president of the Boston C. T. A. U., has appointed William H.

Duffy of the St. Mary's C. T. A. U. of Lynn as deputy to the local society.

Many members are discussing the possibility of having a joint outing with the Lynn society, similar to that held six years ago. Mr. Duffy is well known in this city and will make an official visit in Lowell soon.

The archdiocesan C. T. A. U. will hold a banquet on Oct. 8 in Boston to commemorate the 124th anniversary of Fr. Mathew's birth. All the C. T. A. societies will be represented and a large delegation from the Mathews will attend. William H. Carey of this city is on the committee in charge of this affair. Rev. Fr. O'Connor of Boston, chairman of the committee, states that the president of the C. T. A. U. of America, Rev. Fr. O'Callaghan of Chicago, will attend.

The first smoke talk of a series arranged by the literary committee will be held on Oct. 6. Louis K. Reardon, commissioner of public works for the city of Boston, a former engineer at Panama, will deliver an address on the canal. His five years' work on the isthmus won him praise from the government officials at the time of his retirement to accept a position in his native city.

Rev. Denis A. O'Brien, D. D., of Cambridge, a former officer of the society, will also address the members at this gathering and his talk will be on the life of Fr. Mathew. Each member will be privileged to invite a friend and a large attendance is expected on that evening.

AMUSEMENT NOTES

MERRIMACK SQUARE THEATRE

To the student of the technique of the drama the scenes, situations and climaxes by which Porter Emerson Browne has told the story of "A Fool There Was" which will be the attraction in which the Merrimack Square Theatre Stock company will be seen at this theatre starting with a matinee today and evening. This story with its consecutive building from one to another, is a joy and a delight; to the theatregoer in search of a thrill which will make tears at one moment and laughter at the next; to the theatregoer who looks at life with a cynical sneer and wants the drama put before him without the slightest touch of artificiality, "A Fool There Was" appeals. It is truth, it is wisdom, it is psychology, it is everything which stirs and thrills, which amuses and entertains, and yet which appeals to the brain as well as to the senses. In other words it is one of the really great dramas not of the day or of the decade of the century, but of all time. It is a play of power, too, one which contains many lines of rare rhetorical beauty, and one which requires at times the height of dramatic expression and which attains a climax, which though sensational, it is also artistic.

The husband is delegated to a foreign mission by the president of the United States and meets the woman just as he is about ship and is bidding good-bye to his wife and child. But a short time elapses before he falls hopelessly in love with her, with the result that he is discharged by the president, loses his friends, gives up his family and everything of value for the sake of being with her. Finally he becomes a drunkard, a physical wreck and his mind gives way under the strain in the midst of all this misery, "the vampire" visits him, demands a kiss as he topples over dead and laughs joyfully when she kneels over the body and is sure she has another victim.

Sam A. Meharry will play the husband, Miss Irene May will be seen in the role of the wife and "the vampire" will be played by Miss Sadie Galloppe. Wm. B. Freeman has been allotted the role of the husband's friend and best friend and it is upon the shoulders of the above members of the company that the brunt of the telling of the story lies. That they will give an artistic, creditable performance goes without saying. To be sure the other members will be seen in minor roles but they are nevertheless important in the whole. An unusually fine production has been arranged and "A Fool There Was" should cause more than the usual interest among theatre goers the coming week.

THE OWL THEATRE

An announcement of great interest is that the five-act production of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" is booked for Monday and Tuesday at the Owl. This feature is acted by a famous cast and wonderful photography make it a play of the kind that is rarely seen. This revival of the famous old story has created no little amount of interest among the photo-play fans, and a good program has also been secured besides this feature for these two days.

THE ROYAL THEATRE

The Royal theatre has booked another big feature from the General Film Company. This time it is the marvelous tale of adventure in five reels entitled "From Fire to Fortune," or "The Sunken Village," a play that has caused no end of favorable comments from the critics. A splendid cast recruited from the Lubin forces is seen to advantage in this production. Not only the prices remain the same during these next two days, although the cost of this booking is exceedingly high, the management believes in giving the public the benefit of an extra good performance daily. Today and tomorrow's program will also contain a great two-part Kleino-Cello feature called "When the Beacon Failed," a romance of the seashore, which is produced in the best manner imaginable. The excellence of these Cello features are well known to the general public. Many others will complete the program.

TOWN OF CHELMSFORD

Meeting of Water District to be Held Next Wednesday—Large Attendance Expected

A special meeting of the water district of the town of Chelmsford will be held Wednesday evening next and it is expected the affair will be largely attended. One of the most important matters to be brought to the attention of the voters will be the question of paying $4,386.32 to Thomas Bruno, who did the recent piping work in the district, and who claims he sustained a loss of over $4,000 on the job.

It is understood that Mr. Bruno has asked the water commissioners to reimburse him that amount, but they refused and at his request the matter was inserted in article 7, of the warrant, which reads as follows:

To see if the district will vote to reimburse Thomas Bruno for the financial loss (estimated by him to be $4386.32) actually sustained by him in the performance of his contract for laying of water pipes as per his agreement entered into with the commissioners of the district under date of August 18, 1913, and not in relation to the same.

It is expected that Mr. Bruno will be present at the meeting and will explain to the voters how he sustained his alleged loss.

Money goes on interest Saturday, October 3rd at The Lowell Five Cent Savings Bank.

THE RABBIT'S FOOT

BY GWEN SEARS

SLEEPING OUT OF DOORS

In this age of fads and cults, so many persons, especially young women, have acquired the habit of sleeping in the open, despite the harshness of the elements.

Fresh air is all right in its place, but no human being was ever built to endure the strain of sleeping in the open exposed to snow storms, rain, winter cold and sultry dampness.

Of course it has been done, and is being done every day, but the result will be disastrous. So severe is the storm and cold in this country, that even a beast would soon perish after many nights of exposure.

To sleep with the windows open, and the covers well tucked in around the body, is the only right way to enjoy the healthful recuperating power of slumber, but to drift with the north winds and the treachery of the rain storms on an open piazza, is not only dangerous but absurd.

In less than a year the whole face looks aged and drawn like a dried autumn leaf. For an example of this study pictures of the Indians and you will find that their faces are a network of tiny wrinkles, caused from their out of door life, day and night.

An old mountaineer's face, which has borne the storms for many years resembles a dried apple. Then why should mankind of peaches and cream complexion risk such a fate.

THREE DOLLARS PER YEAR. TWENTY-FIVE CENTS PER MONTH

AIKEN STREET SEWER

The extension of the Aiken street sewer is but a very slight feat of engineering compared with some things which the city has done, is now doing, or is about to do, but nevertheless in effect it is a far-reaching innovation and one that will have no slight part in improving the sanitary conditions of the community. Its completion must bring a feeling of reassurance to the populous section in the vicinity, for though the work in itself is comparatively slight, its continued neglect might easily have led to very serious results.

So far as the sewer outlets on the Merrimack river are concerned Lowell need not fear outside investigation. On more than one occasion the state authorities have commented on the fact that this city has shown greater zeal and judgment than any other community along the Merrimack valley in this most important particular. Owing to the great difference in water altitudes at different seasons, some of the sewer outlets—even those built out into the river—were above the water level in the summer, with the result that they were plainly obnoxious at times and always a fruitful source of danger. To follow the progress made of late years in sewage disposal would be to read of community infection in every form of contagious disease. It is the part of prudence for the city to anticipate the slightest wish of the state board of health in anything connected with sewage at all times, thus ensuring to the city immunity from almost certain disease infection.

It is no secret that the Concord river within the city limits affords the strongest possible contrast to the Merrimack river in all that relates to sewers and drainage. Not only the city sewers along the Merrimack but the mills and manufacturing plants have been attended to so that possible pollution is reduced to a minimum. Along the Concord many manufacturing plants turn all manner of noxious refuse into the filthy stream, and it is used as an open sewer also by many of the more undesirable tenement blocks and ramshackle residences along its banks. Sometimes the odor from the river bed is almost unbearable as those know who are compelled to use the Andover street bridge, and it is surprising that the region through which the much abused river flows does not suffer more from certain diseases.

About a year ago a bill was introduced into the legislature by a local representative for the purpose of having the Concord dredged, and though it did not meet with legislative favor it brought the necessity for this improvement strongly home to the people of Lowell. There is such an accumulation of all manner of stationary refuse in the channel that no mere sewer improvement or regulations concerning the waste from the manufacturing plants would be adequate to ensure cleanliness, but civic sanitation would be served by such restrictions following a thorough dredging and purifying of the river bed.

This cannot be done without the expenditure of some money, but there is an economy that is more costly than extravagance. If, after one, two or five years an epidemic broke out in the region of Lawrence and Church streets or in lower Belvidere, the ultimate cost might easily surpass the amount needed to make the Concord sanitary. It is a beautiful river and public sanitation and decency demand that it be made a clean river. Now that we have done so well with regard to the Merrimack within the city limits, why not go seriously to work to improve the Concord? The same incentive holds good and the suggested project is by no means of secondary importance.

THE COTTON CRISIS

Though at first glance it may seem contradictory, the war which is expected to usher in such a great boom eventually for the textile business—especially the cotton manufacturing end of it—has created a serious situation for the cotton producer. As a result we have a well defined cotton crisis, to overcome which many wise individuals from the head of the government to the inconspicuous individual in our industrial communities are exerting themselves. The strongest manifestation of this general desire to help is shown in the "buy-a-bale-of-cotton" movement which has been started by far-seeing business men with the official and unofficial approval of President Wilson and the other administration heads.

The situation is this: All of the European countries engaged in the gigantic war have been hitherto our customers, buying more of the raw cotton grown in America than was used by our own mills. This year there has been an unusually good crop and the cotton growers and selling agents would have reaped a great harvest were it not for the struggle abroad which has temporarily destroyed the foreign market and left our cotton growers with a large supply on their hands. Most of this they cannot get rid of, unless they are willing to cut down their prices to such a low figure that all profits will be eliminated.

The war had scarcely started when Texas felt the pinch; her great crop was without a market; now all the cotton growing states are in dire distress. No adequate provisions have been made for storing on a large scale and though everything possible is being done by the states, the planters and the federal government, the entire cotton industry is threatened with bankruptcy. As is to be expected, speculators are already banking on the necessity of the south and there is the possibility that the cotton may be almost given away.

The "buy-a-bale-of-cotton" movement has been started to offset this danger and to keep the cotton growers from ruin. Those who agitate it suggest that thousands of individuals in all parts of the country buy at least one bale of cotton at the normal figure, thus partially making up for the shortage in the foreign market and preventing the ruin that may or may not be inevitable. Cotton of a good variety sells now at 14 cents the pound or $50 per ton, and it is certain that if the present emergency can be tidied over, the price will rise proportionately to a more or less degree.

donate to the coming demand. Those who respond to the call of the south and show their practical sympathy by buying a bale of cotton may feel assured that money so spent will be well invested and will return with interest next season.

The very fact that France, Germany, Belgium and to a lesser extent England have bought no cotton from us this year is the strongest indication of the stagnation in foreign manufacture that will follow the war. The various countries will be impoverished; they will have lost their best workers; they will be confronted with all manner of internal demands and will lack industrial initiative. From all over the world will come strong demands for the products of the cotton looms and America will get the lion's share of the resultant business. Consequently there will be a greater demand in our own country for raw cotton, and there will be a renewed demand in other countries that the paralyzed industries may be revived. If the American planter can only be aided in surmounting this time of adversity, it would seem that prosperity to an unprecedented degree looms ahead. In this prosperity those who have bought a bale or bales of cotton may take a pardonable pride as well as a practical share—to some slight extent. The new cotton movement should appeal to the patriotism as well as to the business instinct of prudent Americans.

OBSTACLES TO PEACE

So long as militarism is the dominant European policy so long will peace be deferred, and in this respect it is difficult to say which nation is the worst offender. At least, no nation has a monopoly on the militarist policy. Since the war began, apologists for England and France declare that Germany must be crushed in order that militarism may be put down and Germany applies the same argument regarding its enemies. Thus, public opinion in all these countries agrees that the death of militarism will usher in the dawn of peace, but when it comes to a practical application of the remedy, all nations are found to offend to a more or less degree.

It is a mistake to suppose that the present war will, per se, stop the militarist propaganda which endangers the peace of Europe permanently. In the published declaration of Germany's official attitude some days ago it was plainly hinted that should the allies fight on to the finish and crush German aspirations, Germany will stretchway begin to train its people with the intention of returning the blow at the first possible opportunity. Peace lovers see little in this outlook on which to base their hope of a better and brighter time.

The death of militarism will come, not from any action taken by governments but from the birth of a better spirit in the masses. Today, the multitude is easily inflamed and king, kaiser and czar may plot and counterplot at will, knowing that they can lead their subjects as the baker kneads dough. Some time when all people realize what the people of young America realized viz: that all real power is vested in the people, the murderous militarist policy will disappear and a more enlightened world can plan for some practical method of ensuring universal peace.

LABOR BOARD

Mr. John Golden may have an excellent reason for resigning from the state board of labor and industries, but the rather meagre explanation given for his action does not seem to fully justify it. In all boards of the kind there must be a wide difference of opinion and it is only by different viewpoints as represented by individuals that public questions may be solved in any except a one-sided way. It is inevitable that Mr. Golden should be thrown with men just as earnest as himself and with as great a zeal to serve the public, though possibly seeing things in an altogether different light. His suggestion that all matters affecting state labor problems should be acted on by a board of one, and that one bearing the union card, testifies to his confidence in his cause but does not commend his judgment. The ideal labor board from the public point of view is not the labor board which Mr. Golden would like to see in operation.

PANAMA-PACIFIC EXPOSITION

In a statement given to the press a day or so ago Secretary Bryan announced that the European war will not compel the postponement of the Panama-Pacific exposition or result in the withdrawal of any of the nations which had signified their intention of participating. The government has been officially notified by 37 foreign governments of their intention to take part, and even private business concerns in England and Germany will contribute, according to their original plans. The statement of the secretary is most optimistic, but still there is such a close connection between war and business that some eclipse of the great exposition seems inevitable.

As an American institution and as it affects domestic matters, the exposition will be primarily by European conditions. Forty-six states have signified their intention of participating and most elaborate plans are being perfected to make the affair worthy of the event it commemorates. South America, too, is alive to the possibilities of the great bazaar, according to Secretary Bryan, who, among other facts, says that one of the South American governments has increased the amount of its subscription for the exposition since the war began and that all of them are regarding it as an opportunity to extend their commerce. In this respect our own government is not liable to be found wanting.

FOR DEMOCRATIC VICTORY

So far as New England has been able to judge, the political trend of this part of the country will vindicate the national administration, for national politics has been made the local issue wherever there has been any contest—with resultant victory for President Wilson and his supporters. From now until election time many men of many minds will agitate political questions of more or less local importance but behind all is the fact that a democratic victory will be accepted as a vote of confidence in the national administration which deserves it richly. The democratic party has achieved great things while in power and it is about to achieve many other things which must eventually react favorably on general conditions in this country. Maine has shown the way the wind is blowing and it behooves Massachusetts Democrats to work with a will so that a democratic victory may spur on the administration to greater effort.

A. Rustem Bey may find some consolation in the fact that he has the last word, but on his trip back to Turkey must come the realization that what he gained in debate, he lost in diplomacy. The successful diplomat, whether in the light of his own nationality or that he has offended, is the one that listens much and says little—or nothing.

TO CLEAN UP THE SLUMS IS FEARFULLY INJURED

PRESIDENT SIGNS BILL TO IMPROVE WASHINGTON—MRS. WILSON'S DYING WISH

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—Mrs. Woodrow Wilson's dying wish that the worst slums in Washington be abolished, was finally realized yesterday, when the president signed the bill clearing alleys of dwelling places.

On her deathbed Mrs. Wilson expressed the hope that the bill would be passed, and both houses of congress acted. Although it differed in some particulars from the measure as Mrs. Wilson originally championed it, the president decided it accomplished the principal purposes sought.

TRANSFER IS DELAYED

Application for Transfer of German-Owned Steamship to American Registry Not Approved Yet

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—Recognizing that an important precedent will be involved, officials of the department of commerce, it was learned yesterday, have not yet approved the application for the change from German to American registry of the steamship Sacramento, owned by the Southern Pacific company, but formerly the Alexandria of the Kosmos line, a German concern.

State department officials are being consulted before the application is granted. Thus far changes in registry have been almost entirely those in which the ownership of vessels has continued in the hands of Americans. In the case of the Alexandria, however, a prize court may eventually have to decide whether the transfer is bonafide.

EXPLOSION MAY BE FATAL TO CHAUFFEUR—SKULL FRACTURED BY IRON RIM

RUTLAND, Vt., Sept. 26.—Physicians have little hope of saving the life of Gilbert Chirineau, a chauffeur, of Manchester, Vt., who was badly injured in a peculiar accident late Thursday night.

Chirineau had just put a new tire on an automobile and filled the tube with air when the tire exploded. The iron rim crashed into his body, one edge striking him full across the eyes and badly mutilating his face. The skull between and just above the eyes is badly fractured. He is practically blinded and probably will never be able to see again. His nose is broken in two or three places and several bones in his right hand are broken.

As near as can be learned, Chirineau was leaning over disconnecting a foot pump from the tire when the explosion occurred. Friends nearby heard the noise and medical aid was summoned. The man was brought to the Rutland hospital yesterday morning.

Chirineau is 35 years old and unmarried. His mother arrived here last night. A partial operation on the skull was performed yesterday, but the man's condition was such that it could not be completed.

WHAT THE FRENCH MAID SAID

DRESSING ON LITTLE

"Oh, dear, I wish I had a lot of dresses," sighed Marjorie disconsolately.

"Perhaps you cannot have a lot, but you are certainly better off than a girl who does not know how to sew."

"The woman who can sew has an advantage over her less talented sisters, for she can have a variety of frocks through her own energy. There is no excuse for being passé with a dressmaker's stock with accessories."

"The home dressmaker can take advantage of this suggestion and fashion some of the lovely articles displayed in the exclusive shops for herself. In this manner one dress may be transformed into six or seven."

"Search through the shops until you find a frock of simple and modish lines, either of black or dark blue, or of olive, taffeta, chambray or poplin. If you can afford several models, select another of mousseline de sole or chiffon. Bear in mind that the frock must be of the best material and of perfect lines. This means that you will have to pay a few dollars more for the model possessing these qualities, but you will not be the loser in the end."

"After the frock has been decided upon, visit the neckwear department and examine the beautiful articles on display. You will find an infinite variety of dainty chemises and neckwaists of net, sheerest linen or organdie which will be an attractive addition to any frock."

"Another feature emphasized on this season's frocks is the full tulle of transparent materials. They come in all colors and shapes, from short pleated tulle to long tunics which extend below the knees. These are the character of a frock making the plain unadorned morning costume appropriate for afternoon wear."

"The Medici collar has survived the popularity of several seasons and continues in style. The new variation of the collar are not the pleated frills of last year. They are broad during collars wired to roll away from the throat, and are so wonderfully becoming that every woman will add several to her fall outfit. All materials are utilized to fashion these collars. Linen of the coarsest weaves is hemstitched and starched to stand up crisply about the neck. Lace batiste, plain and embroidered net, organdie and mousseline de sole are equally popular."

"You will find a wide assortment of waistcoats to choose from; the more elaborate ones are embroidered or braided, while the plainer designs are unadorned, save for rows of machine stitching. There are quaint old-fashioned waistcoats of broadened silks which might have been taken from the attic chest, so faithfully have the old collars and waives been reproduced. These will be extensively worn over silk or lingerie frocks."

TAKES TENNESSEE LOAN

NATIONAL PARK BANK OF NEW YORK HELPS OUT STATE, FOLLOWING McADOO'S STATEMENT

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—The National park bank of New York yesterday agreed to take care of a $1,400,000 loan to the state of Tennessee, according to an announcement by Sec. McAdoo. Mr. McAdoo, in a statement yesterday said the state was having difficulty in making the loan and that he would help, if necessary.

The afternoon devotional service was led by Rev. A. P. Gaines of Grassmead. Rev. R. S. Parker of Lawrence, Mass., delivered the sermon and Rev. E. C. Dorrison an address.

A banquet was served at 7 p. m. Rev. G. W. Farmer led the evening service and J. B. Dickson, general secretary of the New England Convention of Methodist Men, made an address.

MRS. LUCRETIA H. SMITH DEAD

FITCHBURG, Sept. 26.—Mrs. Lucretia H. Smith, widow of Charles B. Smith, died at her home at 26 Winter street yesterday, at the age of 90. She was widely known here in charitable work for many years, and took an active part in the work at the First Universalist church. Mrs. Smith was the oldest member of the church, and also of E. Victoria Morse Rebekah lodge. Mrs. Smith is survived by two sons, Charles and Frank Smith of this city, and a sister, Mrs. Mary Buzzell of Manchester. The funeral took place at the home this morning.

PEACE TREATIES RATIFIED

Senate Approves Arbitration Agreements With Great Britain, France and Spain

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—Peace commission treaties with Great Britain, France and Spain were ratified yesterday by the senate, making 25 in the series negotiated by the state department which have been approved by this government. A similar treaty with China was favorably reported by the committee on foreign relations, but action was deferred by request of several senators who wish to discuss it thoroughly in view of the situation in the far east involving Germany and Japan, at Kiauchau.

Two More Candidates

Mr. Charles Clapp, who announces that he is a substantial taxpayer but not a street corner politician, will be a candidate again for municipal commissioner. Mr. Clapp ran 220 votes behind Col. Carmichael for the nomination last year and he is confident that he will go the rest of the way this year.

Mr. Frank Ricard, who has taken an active interest in public affairs for several years, has also announced his candidacy. Mr. Ricard was a candidate last year, but withdrew in the interest of Dr. Mignault, who ran for mayor. He has cut the withdrawal rope this year and will go along until the voters decide whether or not he goes farther. All the other candidates are already named and still with us while among the "perhaps" candidates it begins to look quite certain that former Commissioner Barrett will be in the field again.

The New Harlequins

While the gallant followers of the tri-color are singing, as they walloped the kaiser's hosts, the words of the famous anthem:

"Aux armes, citoyens; formez vos bataillons, marchons, marchons, qu'un sang impur Marche sur nos drapeaux, nous vaincrons!"

Nearer home a new Harlequin has sprung up as the result of the recent caucuses, which runs like this:

"Aux armes, citoyens, avec votre approbation, Marchand! Marchand! comme sénateur, gagnerez son election."

Still at It

The editor of the Courier-Citizen goes after the eighth senatorial district once more, with the following:

"The 8th senatorial district has been usual picked from among some amazingly weak candidates on each side, and now gives a bare chance for a lone progressive minority. It is high time that this district 'took a tumble to itself' and braced up."

Last fall he was after David 'Ignatius' Walsh in somewhat a similar manner, but David, middle name and all, landed the gubernatorial plum and will be there once more. But the editor of the Courier-Citizen has one consolation; he doesn't vote in the eighth district.

Those Ignorant Republicans

The Courier-Citizen explains the nomination of Messrs. Cook and Atwill for the offices of state auditor and attorney generally, with this statement: "It is probable that the voters knew nothing whatever as to the rival qualifications of Messrs. Cook and Monette, and voted the first name they came to. Much the same is likely to be true as to Mr. Atwill's big vote for attorney-general, he having the advantage of geographical position by virtue of his initials."

Such being the case, it would seem to be up to the editor of the Courier-Citizen "to take a tumble to himself" and do a little home missionary work within the ranks of his own party instead of harping upon the mistakes of the democracy relative to the qualifications of men whom it places in nomination.

Second Term Talk

The Complacent Citizen of the Courier-Citizen, writing about Congressman Rogers, states in an "as it should be" frame of mind: "It is the history of this district for the past two decades, at least, that a congressman who makes good in his first term is assured of a second." The congressional district referred to includes the 4th and 5th and contains five districts in which Representative John J. Brown and Representative John J. Higgins are seeking second terms after making good during their first terms. What is sauce for the con-

THE SPELLBINDER

The democratic state committee has announced that on the night preceding the party state convention which will be held in Faneuil hall, Boston, on October 3, a big meeting will be held at which all the candidates on the state ticket will be asked to speak, along with other prominent members of the party. Citizens of all political denominations will be invited to attend and see and hear the men whom the democracy has selected to represent it at the state house. This plan does away with the old time social gatherings of "the night before," and is an excellent plan for the republicans to follow. The direct system of primary voting has made the state conventions perfunctory affairs and has caused the attendance at them to drop off. But a monster rally on the evening preceding the formal ratification of the platform of the primaries, undoubtedly will bring a great gathering together and give the campaign an enthusiastic start. The republican political writers would have the public believe that the progressive party is due for a big slump in this state and point to the vote of the state at the election of 1910 to follow here. But according to Maine's defeated candidate for governor himself, there were local issues in the campaign of the Place Tre state that resulted in the throwing down of party lines in the election. The prediction that the progressives will slump next time is actually not to follow here. But according to Maine's defeated candidate for governor himself, there were local issues in the campaign of the Place Tre state that resulted in the throwing down of party lines in the election. The prediction that the progressives will slump next time is actually not to follow here.

Helping Out the State

Those who live on the streets recently offered are of the opinion that the street department certainly was generous in distributing the awful stuff, for it was put out freely, but Commissioner Morse's generosity has extended further and despite the stringency in the remainder of the department there appears to be oil to burn, for along with oiling the streets for which the city is responsible, the commissioner last week called a stretch of state highway, thus saving the commonwealth both time and expense. Princeton street, from Windsor to the Chelmsford line, a stretch of about a mile is state highway and its maintenance is provided for by the state. But evidently believing that the commonwealth needed a little help, the street department has called Princeton street from Windsor street to the line.

He'll Run Again

In language that admitted of no misinterpretation, Commissioner Morse announced yesterday that he would be a candidate for commissioner one year hence. Mr. Morse stated that he had intended to quit after one term, but rather than have it said that the Sun drove him out of the contest he had called determined to run again, and the Sun cheerfully and exclusively announced his candidacy, and offered to make the modest bet of $500 with the Sun that he has done more muckamizing up to Aug. 1 than had been done for five years and that he exceeded former administrations at laying paving blocks by a ratio of 3 to 2. Mr. Morse emphasized his statement with language that was impressive. He is particularly descriptive. The Sun wants better streets wholly regardless of who may or may not be commissioner.

"Gene" Toomey Gets Job

Ex-Representative Eugene P. Toomey has gone to work for the sewer department for "a couple of dollars a day" as Commissioner Morse stated in response to a question as to the amount of his salary. His appearance in the sewer department started the report that he had been given the position of superintendent of sewers, made vacant by the death of the late Frank Lazelle. Commissioner Morse emphatically denied that Mr. Toomey had received an appointment and intimated that "Punchy" Patrick McGowan will be the superintendent of sewers as the practical part of the work is concerned, while some one else will look after the clerical work, presumably Mr. Toomey. Ex-Rep. Toomey was formerly employed as a clerk in the United Cigar company's store and this is his first experience as a city employe.

Making Good Fighters

If the park department continues its present policy of giving competing orders, a boy desiring to play ball in common will have to be a good scrapper before becoming a ball player. Again four ball teams showed up to play on the same diamond at the same time last Saturday, with the usual result, a free-for-all fight for possession of the grounds. One crowd had a permit from Supt. Keenan, while the other had permission from one of the park commissioners. Happily, the baseball season is about at an end and an agreement may be arrived at ere any of our future citizens are murdered as the result of this ridiculous conflict of authority.

They're Wearing Badges

The next time you meet a member of the park commission, say to him: "Let's see your badge." Immediately he may assume an attitude and throwing back his coat like a country constable, display upon his manly bosom a huge and luminous badge inscribed: "Park Commissioner, Lowell, Mass."

Can you beat it?

At a recent meeting of the park commission, Mr. Rountree, sighing, not like his illustrious namesake of days gone by, for more fields to conquer, but for a symbol of his authority to wear upon the fields over which already he holds sway, made a motion that the members of the park commission be supplied with badges suitably inscribed, so that when they appear on the commons and parks of Lowell the public will not mistake them for the ordinary rabble but will know at once that they are the custodians of the public breathing places of our fair city. The motion passed and the badges have arrived. To the credit of the commissioners be it said that they did not seek after badges "made in Germany," nor did they go as far as Tiffany's or even Shreve, Crump and Low's or Bigelow & Kennards. Patriotically they traded in Lowell and secured the badges from John C. Clark at 65 cents per copy, warranted not to tarnish and bullet-proof.

Goldsmith certainly was right, for surely some men want but little here below, and if it costs only 65 cents to make them happy—what's the use!

Tax Bill Clerks

In years past nine temporary clerks have been employed annually to make out tax bills, the work taking about two weeks. This year 14 clerks have been employed and some it is said have worked a month or more on the job. It is assumed that as all tax bills are much heavier this year than last the extra number of clerks was needed.

Alken Street Sewer

The Courier-Citizen yesterday morning referring to the Alken street sewer job which has just been completed, had the following: "For many years the sewer has been agitated but nothing has been done until this year."

Of course the reporter took the information as it was given him, but as a matter of fact Commissioner Donnelly did the greater part of the work on this extension last year and this year's administration simply finished the job.

That Heating Plant

Building Inspector Connor has been quoted as saying that out-of-town contractors have assured him that the heating plant can be installed in the Varum property by November 1.

A local contractor has assured The Sun that he can install the plant in 15 working days and that he will give a bond to make good. Why not give the local contractors a chance on the work?

Table of Tax-Rates

The honor of the lowest tax rate among the 35 cities of Massachusetts which have thus far announced their 1914 rates, goes to Beverly, its low rate of $15.50 being attributed to a steady reduction in the running expenses of that municipality and the consolidation of its water, street, park, sewer and forestry departments, under one management.

Woburn, with a rate of $26, has the highest rate among cities of the commonwealth, with Chelsea, second at $24. There are only 11 cities with rates under $20.

The tax rate of Massachusetts cities with valuations as of April 1 last, follows:

NEW YORK BANKS REPLY

CLEARING HOUSE COMMISSIONERS CHARGED

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—At a special meeting of the clearing house committee of the New York Clearing House Association held late yesterday, Sec. McAdoo's telegram complaining that excessive interest was being charged for accommodations by national banks in New York, Chicago, Boston and St. Louis, was considered, and the following reply sent to Mr. McAdoo:

"Your telegram received. Except on some Wall street loans and on paper placed by brokers, the rate charged to customers and to correspondents by the New York banks does not exceed 6 per cent. Please give us the specific instance to which you refer, and while we have no authority to control the rates of interest charged, if there is any action that is unjustified or unreasonable, we will use our influence to correct it. It is the desire of New York to set an example that cannot be criticised."

The reply was signed by A. H. Wiggin, chairman of the clearing house committee.

PROPOSALS

HEATING AND VENTILATING KIRK STREET HIGH SCHOOL ANNEX

Scaled proposals will be received from the contractors only, at the office of the Commissioner of Public Property and Licenses at City Hall on Friday, October 2, 1914 at 11 o'clock a. m. for the installation of a heating and ventilating system in the Kirk Street High School Annex for the City of Lowell, in accordance with plans and specifications furnished by Alfred S. Kellogg, Heating Engineer.

THE BUILDING OPERATIONS

Contractors Busy Finishing up Jobs on Hand—The Real Estate Transactions

At the present time the building operations throughout the city consist mainly of minor repairs and progress on large jobs well underway. The contractors engaged on house construction are hustling to have the work completed before the cold weather sets in.

Local Building Operations
On next Friday bids will be accepted for the heating and ventilating of the new high school annex in Kirk street, recently acquired by the city. It will be necessary to install the direct and indirect system of heating and ventilating in this building.

Extensive alterations are now in progress in the annex, and when the work is completed, the new addition to the city's educational accommodations will be fully equipped to relieve the congestion which now exists in the high school.

One half of the building is to be made into eight class rooms, and an addition will be built on the ell portion. The old partitions have been torn down and the interior is studied for the partitioning of the plan to provide for the large number of pupils. It has been estimated that the annex will accommodate 300 or more students in a most satisfactory manner.

The work is going ahead rapidly, and will be completed within a reasonable short space of time. When the building is ready, the high school will go back to its former regular schedule of classes, and the work of education at the institution will be carried on smoothly and effectively under the improved conditions.

Mr. Edward A. Simpson has planned to reconstruct his property at 150 New street, converting the present structure into separate dwellings. To accomplish this the ell part of the building will be moved to Wyman st. By extensively remodeling the property, Mr. Simpson will change it into two 8-room dwellings, constructing new foundations, etc. Both will have complete new finishes, hardwood floors, new pantries and bath rooms with modern equipment, and complete new plumbing. The present building contains 15 rooms.

Oliver Clement is going to build an up-to-date blacksmith shop at 51 Allen avenue, and his present is now fixed at a new shop. The new shop is to have, among other modern features, a cement foundation.

A new eight room dwelling house is to be constructed by Cora L. Reharral at 18 Davenport Terrace. The dwelling will be built according to the latest plans and will contain pantry and bath with full equipment.

A. E. Drouin will build a good sized addition to his shoe repairing shop at 74 Lakeview avenue. The new portion will adjoin the rear of the present building.

A new shed for storage purposes is to be constructed in Westview street by R. G. Bartlett.

A two-apartment dwelling is to be constructed by Samuel R. Moores at 207-208 Stevens street. Each apartment will consist of five rooms, pantry and bath, with complete fixtures. According to the plans, the building will be a most attractive one when completed.

With a view to obtaining better light and air, Mrs. Louis H. Hara is to have built an additional dormer window in her house which is located at 322 Walker street.

Mary T. Mahoney is building an additional piazza on the second story of her residence at 37 Laurel street.

PICKING UP NEW METHODS
A great many builders, contractors and dealers can only progress by observing what others have done and following their lead. Whether it be machinery, tools, appliances, methods or wages, a few contractors must take the lead before the great majority will follow. The equipment of one shop with electric power always leads half a dozen others in the neighborhood to do the same, while the use of hoisting engines, derricks, patent scaffolding, etc., quickly shows other contractors how they can save and make money.

The use of motor trucks was, until a few years ago, looked upon as something of a novelty or a fad, the manufacturer predicting that in a few years no horses would be seen, while the contractor was waiting to see how successful the trucks were in the hands of others before he made an investment. Today while the truck has not removed the horse entirely from our streets yet it has found its place and is now looked upon as a necessity to the contractor who wishes to keep up with his competitors. The motor truck is a necessity to carry on his business, whether it be bungalows in the suburbs, farm buildings or city structures.

The use of the truck by a contractor or builder enables him to go after business which would otherwise be too far away for him to handle. It enables him to take his men out six, eight or ten miles into the country every morning and bring them back at night, thus saving their board and expenses

SOME VALUABLE INFORMATION REGARDING THE METHODS OF CLEANING PAINT BRUSHES

Obviously good painting or varnishing cannot be done with unclean pots and brushes. In the first place I would say, keep them clean. Do not allow them to get dirty. In warm weather paint will be apt to gum up brush and pot if too much driers are used, and there always is, even in cold and wet weather. But this is another story.

Well regulated paint shops have a barrel of strong soda or lye water, in which dirty paint pots are placed and after soaking a few days are taken out, scraped, the scrapings saved, and the pot made clean with water and rag or waste. Another method is by fire; place some paper or excelsior in the pot, sprinkle a little coal oil over it, and set fire to it; do this where no danger may follow. With care the soldering will not be injured. Scrape with a putty knife as the heat softens the old paint, and do the inside first, scraping down into the slight blaze until the insides are done, then remove the outside stuff. This takes a very little time, and is useful when one does not have time to wait on the action of the lye barrel.

As to the dirty paint brush, there are various ways for cleaning it. Any fluid that will dissolve oil will clean the brush. Ammonia water, creosote oil, alkali water, hot water, etc. Some use the liquid known as paint and varnish remover, but this is very expensive (though it ought not to be, as it is composed of a cheap material), besides which it injures the bristles, taking the life or spring out of the bristles, making the brush flabby and too soft to work well. When the paint is very thick and hard on the outer bristles, do not cut them, but soften up the old paint, then scrape it away. Benzine and naphtha gum up oil paint, hence are not really good for cleaning the paint brush. If the brush is hard all through then soak it in diluted ammonia or hot oil, then rinse in turpentine and finally wash with soap and water. Or, by making a paste with washing soda, and covering the bristles with it, leaving it on over night, the old paint will be softened up. Or soak in turpentine and wash out with soap and water, then rinse in clear water, then twist the brush between the hands to expel the water. Some recommend the use of hot kerosene, after which rinse in ammonia water. Be careful in placing the brush in turpentine to soak it in paper, to preserve its shape. Hang the dirty brush in hot water, not allowing the water to be above the bottom of the ferrule, and after the bristles have become loose from paint work same with the fingers, separating the bristles as much as possible. Repeat the hot water treatment until the heart of the brush is softened. Next place the brush in turpentine to soak a few hours, then take it out and work it out with a putty knife, removing the loose paint. If still there is hard or only partly softened paint, place the brush in some strong soap suds and boil until old paint is soft. Heat or hot water is a great softener of paint.

When I have a lot of hard lead or zinc white and want to mix up a pot of paint, I take the hard paint out of the pot, and I only scum it across it, twist, expending very little effort. Old paint, dried on pot or brush will not soften up as quickly as the hard lead, yet with boiling and time it will, particularly when assisted with a little alkali.

When a varnish brush gets foul the old stuff may be best removed by soaking in varnish remover. As this liquid evaporates very rapidly it is best to have a can of turpentine covered during the operation. While the liquid may have some bad effect on the bristles, yet as varnish aids in stiffening the bristles it does not matter much. Turpentine, and all varnish is presumed to contain some, acts as a stiffener on bristles, so that it is advised when your paint brush becomes very stiff from being too long in water that it be used in turpentine paint or stain for a time.

When done with paint brushes for the day or time being, remove all paint from it, by wiping it against the edge of paddy or putty knife, and wipe off any paint from ferrule and handle, before putting it away. Water is usually employed for cleaning paint brushes in, but if the brush is simply wrapped with wet paper or muslin it will not become dry over night, and the bristles will be in better condition than if kept in water. If done with the brush for a season, better clean it out with benzine and possibly with soap and water, let it dry perfectly, then place in a drawer or cupboard until again needed. Nothing ruins a brush like soaking in water for a long time. As Ashman Kelly in The National Builder.

FIRE PREVENTION IN HOSPITALS
The commissioner of charities for New York city has given instructions to proceed with the work, which was interrupted several months ago, of developing a special system of fire prevention and life protection in the hospitals and other institutional buildings of his department. The work is in the hands of H. F. J. Porter and A. L. A. Himmelwright, consulting engineers of the city. Fire Commissioner Adams, who had made a special examination of the fire hazard in the buildings of the department of charities, was impressed with its seriousness, and strongly endorsed the method of treatment of these buildings which the engineers in question advocated, and now that it has been authorized he has issued instructions to the representative heads of the fire fighting force and the bureau of fire statistics, and also to the bureau of health, with these engineers in working out the details and in the installation of the improvements and equipment proposed by them. Owing to the importance of this work it is to be pushed as speedily as possible.

The first Saturday in October is Quarter Day at The Lowell Five Cent Savings Bank.

SCHOOL ARCHITECTURE

One department of architecture in which great progress has been made of recent years is that of school building. There are many points of difference between the school of today and that of 30 years ago. A school opened recently is essentially modern in its building and equipment. The building is a quadrangle, with a cloister all around it on the inside, and in the center is the assembly hall, octagonal in plan. Around the quadrangle are ten class-rooms, accommodating from 20 to 30 pupils each. All the teaching rooms have two opposite walls exposed to the air. By putting windows in these walls through ventilation is obtained, and so far as present knowledge goes through ventilation is the most economical, the simplest, and the best means of providing fresh air. The windows are provided with protected hoppers at the bottom and swing lights above. The hopper is so arranged that the air is bound to travel upward and diffuse before reaching the room, thus avoiding unpleasant draughts. There is a good deal of color in the building, and the hall is adorned with seven stained glass windows.

Buildings in the construction of which various colored stones are used afford fine opportunity for the architect and builder to show planning and taste by the use of stained or tinted mortar and cement. For this purpose, as well as in pressed brick construction, stains of red, brown, buff and black are now much used. The coloring matter employed should be unaffected by the atmospheric changes and have no influence on the strength or durability of the mortar, containing neither oil, gas, nor salts, the latter being apt to increase the white deposit common to brick fronts. Colors ground in paste form are said to be the most practical, as they mix easily and give a uniformity of color. National Builder for September.

This page is to be published each week and will be devoted solely to the interests of the real estate and building field, including, naturally, the various other related trades, such as furniture dealers, storage, and all who have anything to do with the buying, selling, erecting, or equipping the interior or exterior of a home, a business block, or any other structure.

Doubtless the men in business in these various fields have at times items of interest regarding their activity, or some particular phase of the business, and The Sun invites them to send in for publication. All contributions to this page should be left at The Sun office no later than Thursday evening of each week, in order that they may be received in time for publication on the Real Estate and Builders' page on the Saturday following.

It has been one of the aims of this paper in introducing this weekly feature to establish a direct medium of communication between the men in the real estate and building trades and the general public, to promote the advantages of both. People seeking information concerning where to find property of a certain nature or to whom to go to have certain alterations performed or a building equipped, will find The Sun's new weekly feature a great help.

THE BRITISH SUBMARINES

Blockade the Elbe—Entrance to Kiel Canal is Under Watch of Torpedo Craft

LONDON, Sept. 26.—When Winston Spencer Churchill, first lord of the Admiralty, summarized for an Italian correspondent, as published yesterday, the practical results of England's command of the sea, he let slip the first definite information on the pressure that the British fleet is exerting along the coast of Germany.

"Our submarines are blockading the very throat of the Elbe," was all he would say of the actual operations. But the public takes this as indicating that the grand fleet has by no means lain inactive, though its doings, almost as much as Admiral Sir John Jellicoe's plans of campaign, are kept under cover with remarkable success. Instead of contenting himself with a general blockading position on the high sea, the British commander has his scouts at the very entrance to the Kiel canal itself.

English Inside German Lines

The only regular engagement by portions of the fleets, when five German warships were sunk, occurred near the Island of Helgoland, which lies 25 to 40 miles out in the North sea from the nearest coast of the indented German shore. Helgoland has been made a strong outpost of Germany's naval base.

Hence the English submarines, at least, are maintaining a position far inside that first line of defense. If any other parts of the British fleet have ventured so close to Germany's naval stronghold, no inkling of it has been let out. But it is presumed a supporting squadron is within reasonable call of the little underwater fighters.

The mouth of the Elbe river estuary, some 15 to 20 miles wide, is about 70 miles distant from Helgoland. Cuxhaven, an important port on the North sea at the southern limit of the Elbe mouth, lies 65 miles from Helgoland.

Great Ports Far Inland

Brunsbüttel, on the north shore of the Elbe and close to the canal entrance, is 80 miles east-southeast of Helgoland. Hamburg, on the Elbe, is 85 miles by sailing from Brunsbüttel and fully 100 miles by the channel. Bremen, the other great port of Germany, likewise enjoys the protection of a long river course against a sea attack, being 55 miles south-southeast of Bremerhaven, on the Weser. This river empties into the North sea some 35 miles south of the Elbe.

Hence attacks on these ports by sea is almost out of the question. Submarine blockaders at the river mouth, however, not only can bottle them up, but are in position to interfere with warships using the Kiel canal entrance.

Meanwhile the grand fleet sails to number 200 warships, is steaming up and down the coast, as Lord St. Vincent, in fair weather and foul, kept the sea in front of Boulogne and prevented Napoleon's fleet and 200,000 veteran troops from invading England.

GERMANY HOLDS 50,000

ROME DISPATCH SAYS GENERAL STAFF WAS FORCED TO ADMIT ERROR IN LIST OF PRISONERS

LONDON, Sept. 26.—The Central News Agency has received the following dispatch from Rome:

"A message from Berlin says the general staff, having agreed to the complete official list of prisoners, has found it necessary to admit that the totals already announced were erroneous. The aggregate number of prisoners in German hands is now reduced from 250,000 to 50,000 of whom 30,000 are Russians."

JEALOUS FRENZY

Hosea Ball Shot Mrs. Wood and Cut His Own Throat

LYNDONVILLE, Vt., Sept. 26.—Hosea Ball, 30 years old, a teamster of the town, probably fatally shot Mrs. Myrtle Wood of St. Johnsbury early last night and then attempted to commit suicide by gashing his throat with a jackknife. The woman is not expected to live, but Ball, who was found near the scene of the shooting by railroad employes, was treated by a local physician and later taken to St. Johnsbury by Sheriff W. H. Worthen.

Mrs. Wood, only child of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Duval of Folsom Crossing, about a mile above the village, and Ball, who has lived with his mother at Lyndonville, have known each other since childhood, but it was never known that they were more than acquaintances. Two years ago the victim of the shooting, who is 26 years old, married Perley Wood of St. Johnsbury. They have no children.

Mrs. Wood has been staying with her parents here and about 7.30 last night went to the home of John Flower, about half a mile distant, to get some milk. She had covered about an eighth of a mile, through a back road, on her return journey when she was accosted by Ball, who had evidently been drinking heavily.

Ball stopped the young woman and said: "Well, Myrtle, you're married now, aren't you?"

"Yes," she replied.

Ball, it is said, then pulled a revolver from his pocket and, exclaiming: "Myrtle, you'll fix you," shot her twice, one bullet entering the stomach and the other lodging below the heart.

Mrs. Wood, weak from shock and loss of blood, ran back to the Flower house and, pushing open the kitchen door, fell upon the floor. In the meantime, Ball took a jackknife from his pocket and inflicted two ugly gashes on his throat. His cries, however, were heard by employees of the Boston & Maine railroad at the roundhouse, half a mile away, and they found him thrashing around in some bushes, close to the scene of the shooting.

Mr. C. C. Waller of Lyndonville was called to attend Ball's wounds and Mr. Flower summoned Dr. A. Cheney of Lyndonville and Dr. John A. Allen of St. Johnsbury to attend Mrs. Wood. Sheriff Worthen, who had been notified, arrested Ball, and after his injuries were treated handed him over and took him to the jail in St. Johnsbury. It was stated at midnight that Ball would probably recover.

SITUATION IN MEXICO

REPORTED VERY GRAVE

Villa and Carranza Still at Swords Points — Carranza Says Villa Demanded Impossible Changes in Call Issued for Conference of the Constitutional Chiefs

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 26.—General Carranza, the acting head of the Mexican government, in discussing the statement which he gave out last night reviewing the difficulties between himself and General Francisco Villa, states that the situation is grave but that the constitutionalists are ready for any emergency. General Villa, he declares, demanded impossible changes in the call issued for a conference of constitutionalist chiefs on October 1.

Villa's demands, he said, were that the general conference pledge itself to reestablish the national and state civil regimes within 30 days after the conference concluded its discussions, that present army officers shall be eligible as candidates for any elective office; that the federal state legislature be convoked immediately and that the electoral college be chosen for the election of a permanent president.

AMERICAN TROOPS WILL NOT BE WITHDRAWN UNTIL TROUBLE IS OVER

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—Villa is said to have 6000 men on the way to Sonora and it is believed this force will so outnumber the followers of Carranza that the latter will avoid a fight, thus ensuring temporary peace at least. The hope of officials today that actual warfare would be averted was further strengthened by the fact that Carranza has said he will not attack Villa.

Meanwhile there seems to be little prospect of the American troops being withdrawn from Vera Cruz until the troubles between the two generals are adjusted.

Although negotiations with Carranza have come to the point of asking him to name some one to whom the custom house may be turned over, the fact that he is expected to cause delay in reaching a satisfactory understanding. Officials of the United States, however, are taking into consideration the possibility of Villa objecting to this government constraining the Carranza authority as the central government in Mexico, and it is believed the large amount collected by American officers in the way of customs will not be turned over to any faction in Mexico but will be held until there is a firmly established government.

As President Wilson is maintaining a position of neutrality as between the two factions, he is endeavoring to insure on consular agents the importance of refraining from involving the United States on the side of either Carranza or Villa. Whatever the consuls do will be in the line of aiding the two chiefs or their representatives to come to some understanding.

REVENUE BILL PASSED HURLED FROM AUTO GILBRIDE CO.'S OPENING

ELLEN DEMOCRATS IN RANKS OF OPPOSITION—SENATE WILL ATTEMPT TO AMEND MEASURE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—The democratic party applied its majority in the lower branch of congress yesterday and passed the $105,000,000 tax measure by a vote of 232 yeas to 133 nays with two members present and not voting. There was not a single republican vote for the measure. The measure is a member of the minority voted on record for the bill was Copley of Illinois, once a republican but now recognized as a progressive.

Eleven democrats refused to respond to the party call, one of them from New England, Stevens of New Hampshire. The other 20 who roamed off the reservation were Hobson of Alabama, O'Hare of Illinois, Ragdale of South Carolina, Sisson, Stephens and Witherspoon of Mississippi, Callaway of Texas, Church of California, Thompson of Oklahoma and Wingo of Arkansas.

The roll call concluded at 6 o'clock. There was no demonstration when Speaker Clark announced the result of the vote.

When the bill is taken up in the senate there is likely to be a long discussion and efforts will be made to amend it in certain particulars.

The democratic leadership had the house well in hand. The lower branch divided almost strictly on partisan lines. The most notable exception was Richmond Pearson Hobson of Alabama, who made a speech against and voted against the bill because it placed a tax on liquors, a recognition of the legality of the traffic.

Congressman Gallivan was the one member from Massachusetts who secured the floor for an extended speech. The Boston congressman made one of the best speeches of the entire debate. He was applauded by both sides of the chamber.

FELL FROM STAGING

ALEXANDER ANDERSON OF BROOKFIELD INJURED WHILE WORKING AROUND A SILO

BROOKFIELD, Sept. 26.—Alexander Anderson fell from a staging about a silo on the Blanchard farm yesterday, 30 feet to the ground, striking on his head. Merton E. Wilson, superintendent of the farm, rushed the injured man to the office of Dr. Mary H. Sherman, and a few hours later Mr. Anderson was taken home by Mr. Wilson.

J. H. H. MACKAY DEAD

GREENFIELD RESIDENT FORMERLY PROMINENT IN MASONRY IN LONDON

GREENFIELD, Sept. 26.—James Henry Hudson Mackay, aged 61, died suddenly Thursday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Snyder at 32 Crescent street. Mr. Mackay was a native of Wick Cathness, Scot, coming to this country two years ago from London, where he was a borough surveyor. He had been employed here as a bookkeeper for W. E. Benson. His daughter, Miss Madge Mackay, came here six weeks ago from London to visit her father and Thursday evening they went calling. On their return Mr. Mackay was taken suddenly ill and died a few minutes later.

In London Mr. Mackay was prominent in Masonry, having been past master of two lodges. He had a Balfour Volunteers' medal for long service in territorial work.

Mr. Mackay was a member of the vestry choir of St. James' Episcopal church of Greenfield.

In addition to Miss Madge Mackay he leaves two other children, Miss Dorothy J. Mackay and James Frederick Mackay, both of London.

Hamilton received a broken collarbone, severe cuts on the face and bruises on the side and legs. After being attended by a physician he was removed to his home in Pawtucket. The automobile was badly wrecked.

TORPEDO BOAT FLOATED

ALBANY, Sept. 26.—The torpedo boat McDougall was floated at high tide today after having been stuck in the mud for several hours at her pier. The McDougall conveyed the steamer that brought the Atlantic Deep Waterways association convention and Josephus Daniels, secretary of the navy, to this city yesterday and low tide last night left her aground.

The convention delegates inspected the upper Hudson and the barge canal in Troy and vicinity today and expected to return to New York tonight.

CHAMPION DANCING MEET

OF MERRIMACK VALLEY TO BE HELD AT ASSOCIATE HALL WEDNESDAY EVENING

For a long time the champion exhibition dancer has been in dispute. The dancing people of Lawrence claimed Mr. Maguire and partner held the title; Nashua claimed Mr. Moran and partner held the title; Boston also had several claimants, likewise Lowell and Haverhill. The management decided it was about time for the dancing public to know who was the real champion of the Merrimack valley. Lowell dancers have held their own in events of this kind and having several local candidates for the title in Mr. Duncan Heslin and partner, Mr. Shuey and partner, Mr. Harry Williams and partner, the other cities mentioned will no doubt have a hard time in wrestling the title from the Lowell dancers. The management says this contest will be the largest and best ever held in New England. The silver cup prize is exhibited in Kittredge's window.

The managers have gone to great expense and have signed contracts with 15 of the best singers from all over New England to come here and furnish an entertainment with new and novel features rarely ever seen at a popular priced affair.

WARREN CLUB PARTY

HELD ITS THIRD ANNUAL SOCIABLE AT ASSOCIATE HALL LAST EVENING

The Warren club, composed of several young men prominent in the social affairs of the city conducted another successful event last evening in Associate hall, the occasion being the third annual autumn party. There was a very large attendance, 400 young couples being the estimate given, and the evening's program proved very enjoyable and reflects much credit on the hospitality of the committee in charge.

Dancing was begun at 8 o'clock to the pleasing strains of Broderick's concert orchestra, and from that time on, the young people danced up until 12 o'clock, when that old saying "the longest way round is the swiftest way home," repeated itself over and over again to nearly everyone present.

About 9 o'clock, Mr. Joseph Sheehy and partner, Miss Florence Bridgeford, gave a most delightful exhibition of the modern dance steps. The one-step, maxixe and hesitation were all ably portrayed by this clever young couple who have tripped themselves into the hearts of people all over New England in the comparatively short time they have been dancing. They were given a great hand on leaving the floor.

The following officers and committees are responsible for the success of the event:

General manager, John H. Farrell; assistant general manager, Fred Smith; floor director, Hugh Flinnerty; assistant floor director, John Joyce; treasurer, Edward Barrington; assistant treasurer, John Barker; chief aid, Frank Flinnerty; aids, everybody.

Reception committee: Chairman, Fred Webster; John Welsh, Franklyn Williams, Edmund Preston, Frank O'Brien, Walter Cleary, William McCarthy, Thomas Dowd, Harry Snyder, Louis Tullen and Thomas Conley.

The Japanese have taken over the charge of the railway station. The Chinese troops remained in the city but did not oppose the Japanese.

AMONG THE TOILERS

Miss Emma Ladham, of the Shaw history has returned from a two weeks' visit to friends in Ayer, Mass.

Joseph Connor, of the Mass. mills has returned from a visit to relatives in Buffalo, N. Y. He has some two weeks.

Frank Loppner has severed his connection with the Bury Shoe company, to accept a more lucrative position out of town.

John Sharkey of the Lowell Bleachery has returned to work after being confined to his home for some time as the result of an injury received while at work.

Charles Larouche of the Federal Shoe company, well known as an amateur baseball player will in all probability be seen inside the wire cage as a basketball player this season.

The coming dance by the Primrose campers, a party of young men employed in the mills and factories in and around Lowell is being given at the Lowell Hotel. The most intricate steps were easily portrayed by this clever pair and they were given a great hand on leaving the floor.

The exhibition of Joe Sheehy and partner at a party held last evening was witnessed by a large crowd and was highly enjoyed. The most intricate steps were easily portrayed by this clever pair and they were given a great hand on leaving the floor.

Michael A. Lee, business agent of the Carpenters' union, who is also a candidate for representative on the progressive ticket is going about his campaign in a quiet manner without any show or bluster, something that isn't characteristic of politicians nowadays.

Plans for the Manufacturers' bowling league are being completed and the allies will fairly hum with excitement this year. Charlie Farrell's Tremont and Suffolk wonders will have to hustle this year if they want time to claim the reputation of "champs." Charlie has all members of his team in training, however, and that counts for something.

The meeting of the members of the Bury & Shoe Workers' union and their friends which will be held in Harrington hall, Oct. 4, gives promise of being very largely attended. Prominent officials in the organization have been engaged to be present and speak and a good time is promised. Daniel P. Whalen, local organizer of the union has full charge of arrangements and is putting in a whole lot of hard work to make the meeting a success.

I. B. of E. Workers Union Met

The International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers union met in the union headquarters in the Plake building last evening. The meeting was largely attended and a list of important business was transacted. Five new members were admitted and three applications received. Several of the members submitted interesting reports and many spoke on the condition of the union. The secretary reported the union to be run on a firm financial basis and everything progressing.

Millmen's Union Held Meeting

The Millmen's union held a largely attended meeting last night in the union rooms in the Plake building. Considerable business of an important nature was transacted and two propositions were received and favorably acted upon. Communications from many sources were read and referred to the secretary. Committee reports were read and all in all a very successful meeting of the members spoke on the good of the union and their remarks which were very interesting were attentively listened to. The secretary's report showed the union to be in a flourishing financial condition and every member working.

Lawrence Manufacturing Co.

The Lawrence Manufacturing Co., of Lawrence, Mass. is a company called is one of the most complete manufacturing plants of its kind in this part of the country. Many improvements have been added in the last few years which have been of much benefit to the employees and it must be said that the generosity of the company has been fully appreciated.

This year the company furnished a ball ground for the young men of the plant which compares favorably with any in the city. They also furnished the team that represented the plant which are situated in Allen street and very large and there is plenty of room for two or three ball games to be played at the same time. It is not an unusual sight on Saturday afternoon, when baseball holds full sway to see four teams in hotly contested play on the diamonds which are as smooth as billiard tables. The team that represented the plant this year fully repaid for the generosity of the company for the recent which is one to be proud of.

In nineteen games played they have only been defeated three times and all have been hard fought struggles against the best teams in the city. The last game played was against the fast aggregation of ball throwers representing the C. A. C. and the latter team succeeded in winning out, but only after every trick and stratagem point had been worked by both teams. Another meeting between these two teams will probably be arranged before the season is ended and it will be sure to attract a good deal of attention. Agent Walker is an enthusiastic follower of the ball team and never misses a game if he can possibly attend.

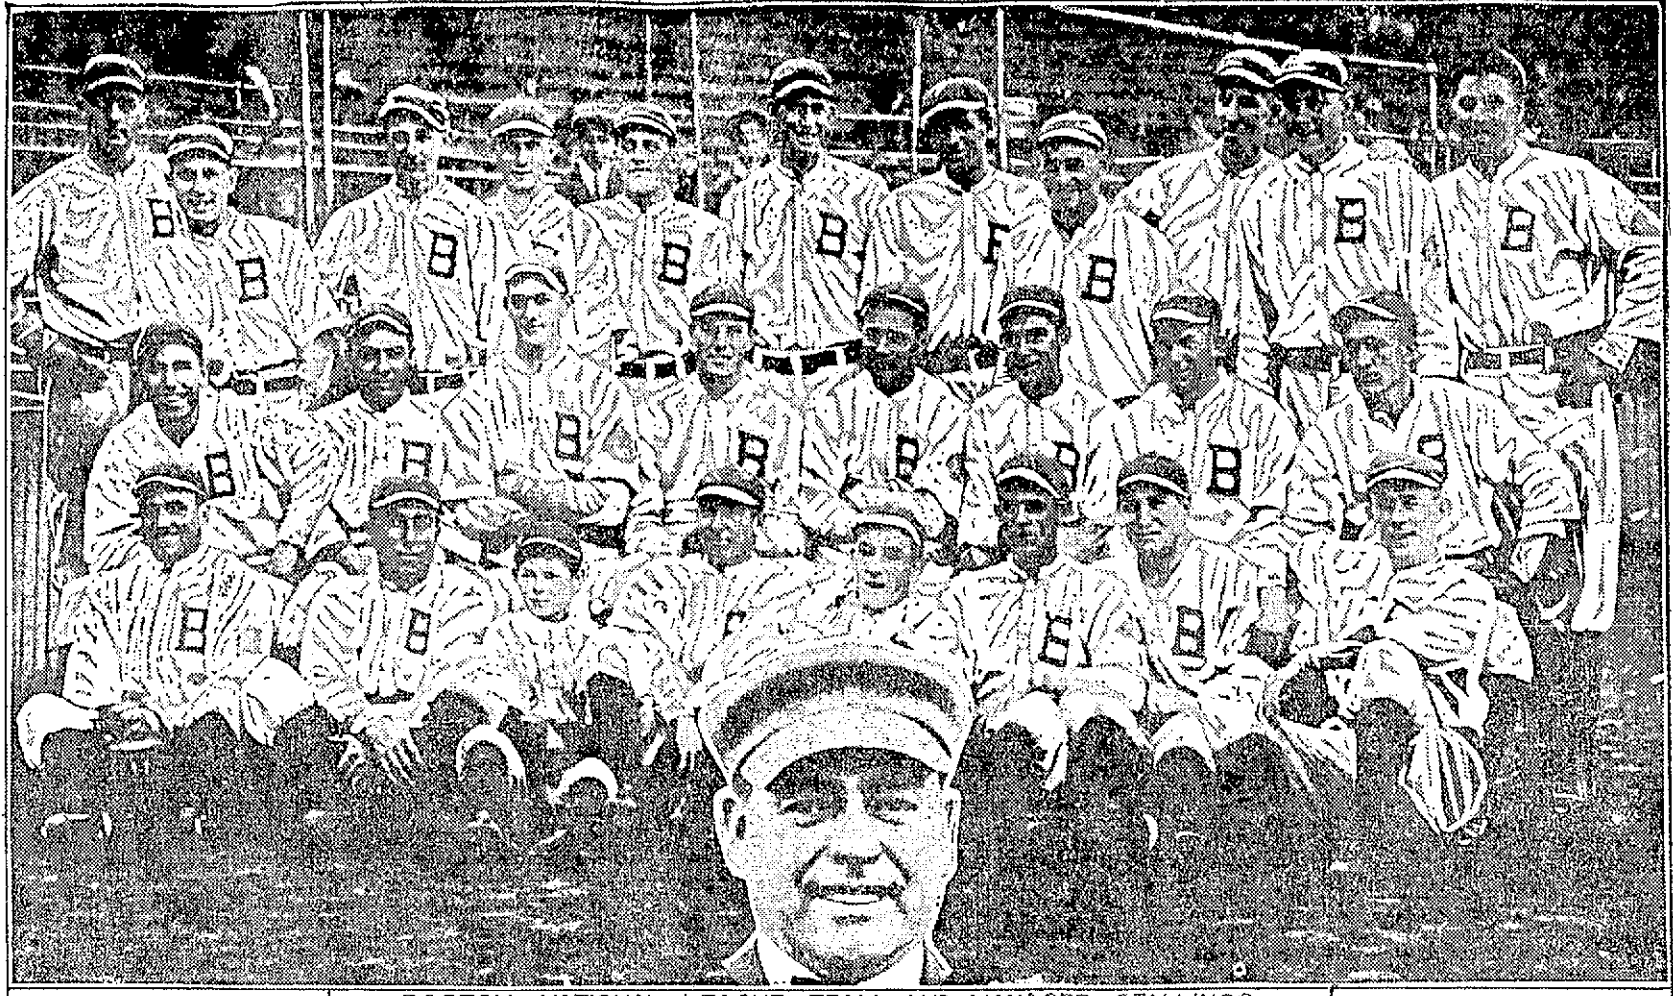

But to go back to the plant. The feature that strikes the visitor most forcibly is the thorough ventilation of the operating rooms; the almost total absence of lint; the good light that is provided by the systematic arrangement of machinery to secure the best results from ample window space, and the silence that pervades the place in spite of the fact that machines everywhere are whirling and twirling in their rapid and almost magical movements.

As the operatives move around their machines each gives the appearance of simply being a member of a great family family going about some duty in the rooms of their own household. The whole tone of the place is on a high plane, and in looking over the plant as it moved so smoothly the writer felt that the company studies the needs of the employees as sincerely as its own financial interests.

REPORT CONTRADICTED

BERLIN, Sept. 26 via London, Sept. 26.—Reports in the French press that Pope Benedict had made representations to Emperor William regarding the destruction of the cathedral of Rheims are contradicted in a despatch to the Cologne Gazette.

THE BOSTON BRAVES, CERTAIN WINNERS OF NATIONAL LEAGUE PENNANT

Middle row: George B. Whitted, 24; Oscar Duguey, 24; George Tyler, 25; Paul Strand, 20; Joshun Devore, 27; Lawrence Gilbert, 23; J. Carlisle Smith, 24; Herbert Moran, 27.

Bottom row: Joseph Connolly, 27; Fred Mitchell, 35; Willie Connors, mascot; Richard Rudolph, 26; Walter Maranville, 22; Richard Crutcher, 24; William Martin, 21; John J. Evers, 31.

The Boston National League club, commonly called the Braves, have lived up to fond expectations of George Stallings this year. In fact, Manager Stallings was the only man, possibly with the exception of Owner Gaffney, who really thought that the Braves had a chance to make more than a respectable showing this season after the first two months of the season had rolled by.

The history of this season in the National league race will go down in the baseball hall of fame. Never before has a club come up from the cellar position, after playing nearly a third of her games and advanced with out a pause until the top was reached.

Never before has a ball club set the sporting public throughout the country ablaze with enthusiasm as have the Boston Braves this year.

It has been a wonderful season for George Stallings and the present standing of his club is fitting tribute to the character of the man. Although in last place and apparently hopelessly beaten Stallings nevertheless kept doggedly after every ball game on the schedule and finally began to receive some of the "bricks" which had been defeating his team during the first of the season.

The Braves are now certain winners of the National league pennant for the season of 1914. The winning of yesterday's double header with the Cincinnati Reds made the Braves practically negligible. The unremitting work of Manager Stallings has been successful and he and his club will take part in the world series.

The onward march of the Braves toward the pennant has upset the figuring of the country's baseball dopsters. On every hand the remark could be heard during the start of Boston's spurt, "they'll soon break—Stallings has only three pitchers."

Such, indeed, was the truth. Stallings did only have three pitchers upon whom he could rely. Tyler, Rudolph and James were the twirlers upon whom Stallings and the Boston fans were forced to pin their hopes of ultimate success. But as it has proved these three men were enough. Working in regular turn, pitching at least two games a week, these three pitchers mowed down the Braves' opponents with machine-like regularity.

The advent of Captain Johnny Evers into Boston baseball was another big factor in the Braves' success. The former Cub second baseman has proved a tower of strength at the pivotal position, superinduced as he has been by the lightning fielding of Rabbit Maranville. In common parlance today, Stallings, Evers and Maranville are known as the Braves' "Big Three."

Lowell fans will once more have an opportunity of witnessing world series contests near home. The first game of the world series will be played on October 5, the day following the finale of the big leagues' schedules. It is safe to say now that the Athletics and the Braves will be the two clubs in competition.

ATHLETES AND ATHLETICS

Brookton has joined the ranks of professional basketball and will place a fast team in the league down that way this winter. If this city had a suitable playing space Lowell would also be heard from.

Lowell Textile will start its football work next Tuesday. The first game on the calendar is that with Groton, a tough aggregation as a rule. Textile is always handicapped every fall on account of the fact that the school opens late.

Although the Glens broke their losing streak yesterday and took the St. Louis club into camp their victory was of small value as the Braves won both ends of their double header with Cincinnati. There's nothing to it now but the Hub team for the world series.

H. H. Maguire, the Stoneham schoolboy, gave the Massachusetts millmen a big surprise at the state meeting for riflemen at Wakefield. The 18-year-old schoolboy scored fifty bullet holes out of a possible fifty at 200 yards (slow fire).

A meeting of the National Baseball Commission will be held in Philadelphia next Wednesday to decide on plans for the world series. By that time, of course, whatever little doubt remains now as to the results in the American and National league races will be gone.

Once more Cravath with his four base bludgeon won a game for the Phillies. The shuffling right fielder has broken up many a game. It was Cravath's fourth home run of the week. Sherwood Magee of the Phillies has twice lifted the ball for the circuit this week.

GIANTS AND CUBS

Zimmerman Exchanged for Marquard and Two Utility Men

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Local baseball fans are interested today in a reported trade between the New York and Chicago National league clubs whereby the Giants secured Heinie Zimmerman, the Cubs' third baseman, in exchange for Pitcher Rube Marquard, Eddie Grant, utility infielder, and Arthur Bues, also an infielder.

It is reported that while the deal had been completed none of the players was given the choice of the players had joined the Chicago club which changed their uniforms this season. Officers of the New York club refuse to either deny or confirm the report.

The Red Sox were badly outclassed yesterday by the St. Louis team. Branch Rickey's players pounded Shero hard and safely for a 10-1 win. Manager Carrigan sent most of his regulars to the club house when he saw that the game was lost and finished with recruits filling their places.

The drafting of minor league players by the majors has been kept secret this season, that is so far as any public announcement goes. In previous years the list of players called to the bigger clubs at the draft price were published by the national commission on or about Sept. 15 but the outlaws have caused a change this season.

On account of the huge dimensions of the newly completed Yale bowl, the students of America's two largest universities will be allowed four tickets for the Harvard-Yale annual football battle. Up to this year two tickets were allowed each student.

Chicago has finally regained the lead in the Federal league and Indianapolis has been dropped one full game to the rear. Joe Linker, it is reported, is to receive a bonus from the club owners if he turned over a championship aggregation. President Gilmore is still threatening to claim the world's baseball championship with the winners of the Federal league if the managers of organized ball do not consent to play the outlaws. However, it is one thing to claim the title and quite another to convince the sporting public that any Federal league club is superior to the Athletics or Braves.

SLEEPYTIME TALES

BY VIRGINIA VALE
FOR LITTLE READERS OF THE SUN

MARY'S SNOW STARS

Once upon a time a little girl named Mary was sitting in her high chair, for she was only three years old, looking out of the window. Her father came in and told her mother it was getting very damp and cold and he thought it was going to snow.

Sure enough, pretty soon it began to snow hard. Now Mary had never noticed the snow before, but today she sat in her little high chair and cooed at the flakes as they beat against the window-pane.

"See pretty stars!" she cried, "Baby want pretty stars!" Big brother Joe was playing on the floor with his blocks. "Stars in the daytime?" he said, "I must see them," and he jumped up and ran to the window. "They ain't stars, they's just snow."

Mary looked blank, so big brother Joe went on to explain. "That's snow—s-n-o-w. We had a lesson about that this morning in school. Snow is frozen water," he said, proud of his knowledge and hoping he was quoting his teacher correctly. "When it wants to rain, and the weather is too cold, the water goes together in little pieces and falls down in the shape of snow. Snow has many shapes, Mary."

"See this one!" and Joe pointed at a very beautiful star that had just fallen on the window. "And to prove that it is water after all, watch it melt and run down the glass."

Mary opened her big blue eyes wider and answered. "Oh, yes," although the answer might have been "No" for all she understood.

Joe was pleased at the interest she was taking, so he went on: "When a lot of these stars fall on the ground, and it is cold enough so that they won't melt, then the snow lies and little boys and girls go sled riding."

"Me want ride," cried little Mary.

"I'll ask mother whether I may take you," he said, and ran to get permission.

Mother was doubtful at first, as Mary had never been out on a rough day. The snow was falling fast, and the wind was howling, but by and by she said he could in the morning when it would be nice and clear and that they could have all the fun they wanted.

"That'll do," said Joe cheerfully, "Tomorrow is Saturday and we have no school."

Next morning little Mary was bundled up in her warm wraps and tied to the sled.

BAKED CHICKEN—Clean and disjoint, then cook in salted water until tender. Drain, brush each piece with butter dust with flour, lay in a baking pan and set in a hot oven to brown. Turn out on a platter, remove the meat to a hot platter. Put six tablespoonfuls of oil in a frying pan, put in the bananas, and when brown on one side, turn and brown the other. Cool, add one quart of thin cream and two tablespoonfuls vanilla. Strain and freeze. For the sauce cut one-fourth cup confectioners' sugar in one cup boiling water, add to the marshmallows and stir until thoroughly blended. Cool before serving.

SARDINE NORWEGIAN—Take a box of sardines and remove the heads, tails, skin and bones. Pound the flesh of the sardines to a paste, add one cup of state sifted bread crumbs, half a saltspoon of salt, half a teaspoon of onion juice, and a dash of tabasco or cayenne. Mix thoroughly, and add the yolks of two eggs. Form into balls the size of English walnuts, fry in deep, hot fat.

WHITE STAR LINER AFIRE AT HER PIER

Italian Reservists Who Spent Night in Steerage Were Routed by Smoke, and Fled in Scant Attire to Pier—Police Called to Restore Order—Ship Was Due to Sail for Genoa at 8.30 This Morning

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Sixteen hundred boxes of cotton stored in the lower hold of the White Star liner Celtic caught fire early today as the vessel lay at her pier under steam and ready to weigh anchor for Genoa. Several hundred Italian reservists, crowded into the steerage overnight, were routed by smoke and fled in scant attire to the pier.

The fire gained headway rapidly. Within 15 minutes from the time the first wisp of smoke curled up from the second hatchway the blaze in the hold appeared to be a roaring furnace and a heavy cloud of smoke spread up and down the river. Owing to the length of the pier and other obstacles the firemen were unable to get a stream into the Celtic's hold until fireboats came up and flooded the decks. In an hour

Four Greater Boston Letter Carriers Were Also Indicted

BOSTON, Sept. 26.—Five postal employees were indicted by the federal grand jury yesterday, charged with larceny, the indictments being reported in the United States district court.

Four of them are letter carriers and the fifth, Jennie L. Munn, was employed in a sub station. The carriers are William H. Williams of South Boston, employed at the Atlantic post office; Chester H. Turner of the Lynn post office; William Rooney of Station A, South End, and Alexander L. Mole of the Lowell post office.

Peter Moore of Worcester was indicted on a charge of importing a woman for improper purposes. Chin Wah was charged with importing opium fraudulently.

Frank X. Roberts and Benjamin Sibley, both of Springfield, were accused of larceny of goods in interstate commerce. Augusto S. Sengulinski was charged with mail fraud, and post cards. William X. Taylor was charged with purchasing military equipment illegally. He lives in New Bedford. Howard A. Clark and William L. Stevenson, both of Springfield, were accused of conspiring to steal parcel post packages. Beril Margolis of Salem street was indicted on a charge of depositing a worthless post card.

Louis L. Kilbourne, a sailor on the Nebraska, was charged with mailing an obscene letter and the case was placed on file.

Charged with bigamy, Helen Stettin was held yesterday by Judge Duffy in the second session of the municipal court in $1600 for an examination Oct. 1. She was arrested by Detective Sergt. Irwin of the East Dedham street station on complaint of Ralph J. Doble of Stafford street, Roxbury, who said that he married her in 1905. In March, 1910, she is alleged to have married Samuel Stettin at Providence, and was working in Stettin's restaurant when arrested by Irwin.

She was known as Helen Clayton when she married Doble in Canada. They separated and when he met her in this city recently she told him that she was married to Stettin and living happily.

RUSSIAN DETACHMENT PLAYS CLEVER TRICK

Cossacks and Artillerymen Pretend Retreat and Austrians Rose to the Bait—No Decisive Results From the Battle of the Aisne—Rain Causes Change in German Operations—Downpour Drives Germans From Their Trenches

PETERSBURG, Sept. 26, 6.45 a. m.—The Russian Slovo has obtained from wounded soldiers, it states, a description of a clever ruse whereby a small Russian detachment in Galicia virtually wiped out a large Austrian force. In its account of the incident it says:

"According to a prearranged plan, several squadrons of Cossacks and artillery men, simulating retreat, began to fall back rapidly under cover of the infantry."

"The Austrians rose to the bait and emerged from their trenches in pursuit in the direction of Small river, where companies of Russian infantry checked the furious Austrian onslaught. Cossacks and artillery, crossing by a bridge entrenched themselves on the opposite bank, posting several machine guns while the artillery hid their guns in trenches under the bushes unperceived by the enemy."

"When the preparations were complete for the enemy's reception, the infantry hurriedly retreated to the opposite bank where they pretended to set fire to the bridge as though intending to cut off the enemy's advance."

"The Austrian troops, seeing before them a small body of Russians, blindly charged. The enemy's infantry, with shouts of victory approached the bridge, while their cavalry dashed through the river. A terrific explosion was heard and the bridge which was crowded with massed Austrian columns was blown to pieces while on the opposite bank the Russian guns and quick firers scattered death among the advancing Austrians until the river was choked with bodies."

"Panic-stricken, the foe attempted to flee, throwing away their weapons, but the Cossacks consummated the work of demolition, fording the stream and pursuing the enemy with yells of triumph."

"Half an hour later it was all over and several Austrian battalions had ceased to exist."

PARIS STILL WAITS FOR NEWS OF SOME DECISIVE RESULTS IN BATTLE OF THE AISNE

PARIS, Sept. 26, 8.50 a. m.—For 14 days the battle of the Aisne has continued, practically without cessation, and still Paris waits for news of some decisive result.

Here and there, according to the official communications the line has given way to one side or to the other, but the importance of these incidents, if any, on the final result has not yet become apparent.

The latest French official statement mentions several such movements. On the French left wing to the northwest of Noyon where the French apparently have been trying to outflank the German right, the French advanced troops, it is announced, were compelled to give a little ground, having come in contact with superior forces. Fresh troops were brought up, however, and the French offensive was vigorously resumed. The communication says the struggle in this region has become extremely violent.

Similarly on the heights of the Meuse, the Germans have had success, but they have not succeeded, the French communication says in crossing the river.

The French report, however, that on their right wing the Germans have begun to give way to attacks coming from Nancy and Toul while in the southern regions of Woevre the enemy is also retreating, but the action continues.

DOWNPOUR OF RAIN DRIVES GERMAN FROM TRENCHES AND CHANGES PLANS

LONDON, Sept. 26, 4.22 a. m.—The correspondent of the Daily Mail in France says that rain has resulted in a change in the German operations on the Aisne. The chalky soil, he says, holds water in the trenches like a sponge and the autumn downpour, therefore, has driven the Germans out of their trenches and forced them to fight in the open, where the French get at them with their bayonets.

The fighting at St. Quentin, according to the correspondent, has been fierce and determined. The Germans drove the French out and secured a large part of the town which they held by means of their maxims. The French, he thinks, could have expelled them by a bombardment, but feared that this would set the town afire and cause great loss of life among the inhabitants.

MAJ. TANKAVITCH IS FOUND DEAD IN FIELD WHERE HE COMMANDED A BATTERY OF ARTILLERY

LONDON, Sept. 26.—The Rome correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph company says that Maj. Roja Tankavitch, to whose intrigues the source of the present war was traceable, has, according to a Vienna dispatch, been found dead by Austrians near Kruppie, where he commanded a battery of artillery in a recent battle.

Maj. Tankavitch was formally charged by the Austrian government with supplying from the Serbian arms factory the revolvers with which the Archduke Franz Ferdinand and his wife, the Princess of Hohenberg, were assassinated at Sarajevo, the Bosnian capital.

General VON KLUCK

General Alexander von Kluck, commander of the German right wing, who has fought hard against repeated attacks of the allies, but has been steadily forced back and threatened with envelopment, was born at Munster, Westphalia in 1846. He became a colonel on Jan. 27, 1886, and a lieutenant general in 1902. He commanded the Fifth army corps in 1906 and the First army corps in 1907. He was raised to the nobility in 1909. He is one of the most important figures in the great battle now raging in France.

DISPLEASES WILSON AND IS RECALLED—FOREIGN DIPLOMATIC CORPS IS LOOKING FOR SHAKEUP

A. RUSTEM BEY

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—With the announcement that A. Rustem Bey, Turkish ambassador to the United States, has been recalled members of the foreign diplomatic corps are looking for a general shakeup among those foreign representatives who have been indulging in newspaper criticisms and comments on the foreign policy of the United States. Within a short time, according to information current in diplomatic circles, the British government will announce the dismissal of Sir Lionel Carden, former minister to Mexico, whose criticisms of the president's policy have given offense to this government. In a letter to the president the Turkish ambassador announces within a fortnight he will leave Washington on a "leave of absence." There seems, however, to be no question the "leave of absence" will be a permanent one and that it was "granted" by the Ottoman government on the strength of plain intimations from Washington that the ambassador's usefulness had been impaired materially by his statement in the press. In it he sought to justify extreme measures taken by his government against the Christians in Armenia by suggesting the United States perhaps would take similar measures if it discovered a conspiracy between the negroes of this country and the Japanese to bring about an overthrow of the American government.
